REMANDED UNTIL MONDAY.

Several boys from Kingston are in the habit of jumping on a freight train and coming to Napanee on a Sunday or holiday. They generally alight at the top of the grade at the east end of the town and have been doing considerable damage to orchards. On Wednesday they were at it again and Mr. Hugh Mooney caught one of the boys in his orchard. Chief Graham was notified by the prisoner was brought before Police Magistrate Baskin, and remanded until Monday. His companions are known and will be brought to Napanee to appear before the magistrate.

POLICE COURT.

On Saturday night, Sept. 5th, Robert Richardson, of Deseronto, was found in a barn and buggy from the sheds of the Market Hotel. On Wednesday night last Chief Graham located his man and brought him to Napanee. On Thursday he pleaded guilty before Police Magistrate Baskin and was remanded until Monday for sentence.

Bert. Perry, of Deseronto, a yard of Richardson's, was also arrested for stealing a gold watch from Mr. John Harris, Sharpe Corners. He pleaded guilty and was remanded for sentence.

Mr. Elliott, who a couple of years ago stole a quantity of copper wire from Mr. Chas. Hambly, was found lurking in Clyde Nash's domains since that time. On Monday night he walked into a hotel in Deseronto where Chief Graham happened to be looking after a couple of prisoners, and was taken into custody. He was remanded until Tuesday for sentence.

Riding bicycles on the sidewalk is practised to a certain extent in town, especially going down Roblin's hill, and Chief Graham wishes us to state that the police ladies will be specially brought to notice regarding the matter.

PERRY-LAING.

On Wednesday, at 12.30 the marriage of Jessie E. Laing, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Laing, and Mr. Arthur J. Perry, son of Mrs. L. E. Perry, of Brantford, late of Newburgh, was solemnized at the residence of the bride's parents, Deseronto, by Rev. T. A. Rodger, B.A., of that place, officiating. The drawing room in which the ceremony took place was prettily decorated with palms, ferns, foliage and asters. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a soft breathing princess gown of cream silk muslin and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Ethel Laing, sister of the bride, and Miss Ethel Laing played the wedding march from Lohengrin. A reception followed and at 1.07 the happy pair were down to a quaint-eyed delusion. The 4.20 Canadian Express carried the bridal party on their trip down the St. Lawrence to Kingston and Brockville, the bride wearing a handsome travelling suit of brown broadcloth with hat to match. The wedding gifts made a most expressive display of the popularity of the bride and the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Perry will reside at Brantford. The guests from outside points were the parents of the groom, Mr. Edward Vale, of Mount Forest, Deseronto; Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Laing, Napanee; and Miss Edna Scott, of Elmvale; and Miss Jean Colliston, of Palmerston.

BASEBALL OF YORE.

A letter was received this week from a former Napanee man who is pleased with the success of the local baseball team this season, and incidentally recalls to mind the old Soldier Leaf team. The writer was a member of the famous Soldier Leaf team that represented Napanee many years ago. He says this team was composed of ten under 18 years of age, was organized for four years, and never defeated. Their opponents were Belleville, Kingston, Odessa, Bath and all the places around Napanee. There is only one member of the present team living in Napanee and that is Sammy Blair. He was our star first baseman. The original team, as far as he could remember, were James Herring, Jack Johnny Phelan, the latter who died last years brothers, Porter Davis, catcher, Sammy Blair, first base, Jack Flower, second base, Charles Muir, (who died on the field) short stop, Charles Shibster, (who died in Toronto a couple of years ago) and "Hobby" Fralick, (now dead) official scorer. The above names will be well remembered by the older generation.

HOW TO COOK SWEETBREADS.

For a light summer salad sweetbreads are unsurpassed. Chop two of them into small pieces, season with white pepper and salt, if necessary; add one cupful each of chopped English walnut kernels and celery. Serve on lettuce with a cream mayonnaise dressing; garnish with pitted olives. Sweetbread croquettes are much to be preferred to those made of heavier and richer meats. Chop them very fine, add two, well-beaten eggs, a tablespoonful of butter, form into balls, roll into the egg, roll in cracker-crumbs and fry a golden brown. Serve in cream with tomato sauce. The German method of preparing sweetbreads is worthy of trial: Cut them into pieces the size of dice and boil them in a sauce made with a tablespoonful of flour and one of butter, moistened a little with the water in which they were first cooked until mixed as thick as cream. Flavor with lemon-juice, and just before serving stir in a well-beaten egg, with a little water to prevent from curdling. Green peas and mushrooms are all best when served with sweetbreads. Boil the sweetbreads and stew for an hour in the water in which the sweetbreads were parboiled; then add a little butter, half a cupful of cream, a little more flour, and pepper and salt to taste. Serve with dressing when combined with sweetbreads and peas seem to bring out the dainty flavor of both without destroying either. Stuffed sweetbreads furnish a dish which practically has no equal. After parboiling, cut them open, stuff and sew up. Prepare the dressing of grated bread-crumbs, lemon peel, butter, cayenne pepper and nutmeg; mix it with well-beaten yolks of egg. Have ready some slips of fat bacon and lemon peel, season as thick as small straws. Lard the sweetbreads with alternate layers of bacon and lemon peel. Put into a pan, set in the oven, and baste every few minutes with veal gravy, thickened with the yolk of an egg and flavored with lemon-juice.—The October Delineator.

DO YOU EAT RIGHT?

FEW PEOPLE IN NAPANEE REALLY KNOW HOW.

Slow eating and regular meals is of great benefit to a wrong acting stomach. Those who suffer with indigestion and dyspepsia can with care and the use of Mi-o-na stomach tablets restore the digestion to a healthy condition, so that they can eat what they want at any time without fear of distress or suffering.

After a few days' use of Mi-o-na stomach tablets, the headaches, dizzy feeling, drowsiness, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, faulkner, sleeplessness, distress after eating—all these symptoms of a weak stomach will disappear, and perfect digestion and good health will be restored.

T. B. Wallace has so much confidence in the power of Mi-o-na to cure indigestion that he guarantees satisfaction or money back. Price 50 cents.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Nerve, not one week heart in a hundred. If it is it actually doesn't count. It is always a blood-nerve thing, pure and simple, and all heart troubles are blood troubles and must have, for power, right quality, more centralizing, more concentrating energy. Without that the Heart must overwork, it fails, and the stomach and kidneys also have been made to suffer.

Certain it is that certain NERV as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and failing Hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought to create nerve by regulating sufficient digestion to digest nerve-making foods, illustrative—this nerve-making principle exists in the stomach, not in the heart. It builds digestive strength—it creates real, genuine heart help.

If you want to build Heart, strengthen Heart, strengthen those nerves—reestablish Heart as it should, with

"It is my local color maybe, absorbed from this country. I'll try to change, though, if you want me to. I'll let them rope and throw and brand me. I'll take on the graces of civilization and put away revenge and ambition and all the rest of it if it will make you like me any better. Why, I'll even promise not to violate the person of our chief purser if I catch him, and heaven knows that means that Samson has parted with his locks."

"I think I could like you if you did," she said, "but you can't do it. You are a savage."

There are no clubs nor marts where men foregather for business in the north—nothing but the saloon, and this is all-sufficient than a club. Here by a convenient to drink, to gamble and to traffic.

It was late in the evening when Glenister entered the Northern and passed idly down the row of games, paused by the crap table, where he rolled the dice when his turn came. Moving to the roulette wheel, he lost a stack of whites, but at the faro "lay-out" his luck was better, and he won a gold $20 on the high card, whereupon he promptly ordered a round of drinks for the man grouped about him, a formality always precedent to overtures of general friendship.

As he paused, glass in hand, his eyes were drawn to a man who stood close by, talking earnestly. The aspect of the stranger challenged notice, for he stood high above his companions, with a peculiar grace of attitude in place of the awkwardness common in men of great stature. Among those who were jostling him by the sum's carefully modulated tones Glenister recognized Mexico Mullins, the ex-gambler who had been Dextry's partner in Unalaska. As he further studied the listening group a drunken man staggered inadvertently to-nigh the swinging doors of the saloon and, gaining sight of the tall stranger, blinked, then approached him, speaking with a loud voice:

"Well, if taint ole Alec McNamara! How do, ye ole pirate?"

McNamara nodded and turned his back coolly upon the newcomer.

"I said hurt your dorsal fin to me. I want to talk to ye."

McNamara continued his calm discourse till he received a vicious whack on the shoulder. Then he turned for a moment to interrupt his assailant's querulous profanity.

"Don't bother me. I am engaged."

"Ye won' talk to me, eh? Well, I'm goin' to talk to you, see. I guess you'd listen if I told these people all I know about you. Turn around here."

His voice was menacing and attracted general notice. Observing this, McNamara addressed him, his words dropping clear, concise and cold:

"Don't talk to me. You are a drunken nuisance. Go away before something happens to you."

Again he turned away, but the drunken man seized and whirled him about, reaching his chase, encouraged by this apparent patience.

"Your pardon for an instant, gentlemen." McNamara laid a large white and maulerred hand upon the flannel sleeve of the miner and gently escorted him through the entrance to the sidewalk, while the crowd smiled.

As they cleared the threshold, however, he clinched his fist without a word and, raising it, struck the set fully and cruelly upon the jaw. His victim fell silently, the back of his head striking the boards with a hollow thump; then, without even observing how he lay, McNamara re-entered the saloon and took up his conversation where he had been interrupted. His voice was as evenly regulated as his movements, betraying not a sign of anger, excitement or bravado. He lit a cigarette, extracted a notebook and jotted down certain memoranda supplied him by Mexico Mullins.

But this time the body lay across the threshold without a sign of life. The buzz of the roulette wheel was resumed, and the crap dealer began his monotonous routine. Every eye was fixed on the nonchalant man at the bar, but the unconscious creature outside the threshold lay unheeded, for in these men's code it behooved the most humane to practice a certain aloofness in the matter of private brawls.

Having completed his notes, McNamara shook hands gravely with his companions and strode out through the door, past the bulk that sprawled across his path and without pause or glance disappeared.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO

WHAT BOOTH'S KIDNEY PILLS ARE DOING FOR NAPANEE, ONT., PEOPLE.

All the blood in the body passes through the Kidneys every three minutes.

The Kidneys filter the blood.

They work night and day to daily remove about 50 grains of waste matter. If they fail, some part of this impure matter is left in the blood, bringing on pain in the back, headache, dizziness, irregular heart, bad, dry skin, rheumatism, general dropsy, deposits in the urine. Booth's Kidney Pills make the filtering right and overcome Kidney trouble. Hundreds of Lennox County residents have found this out.

Mrs. Thos. Smith, of Graham st., Napanee, Ont., says:

"For over four years I had suffered with many annoying and painful symptoms of Bright's disease. I had tried every possible manner of relief but could find nothing to benefit me. The Kidneys were so disordered that I would have to leave my bed a number of times each night with the frequency of the attacks. The urine was scanty, scalding and very sediment. My general health had been very much run down and I would awake more tired and unrefreshed than on going to bed. I tried Booth's Kidney Pills. On advice of a friend I procured them at Mr. Wallace's Pharmacy. They cured me when all else failed. I am strong, well and energetic and will always speak a good word for Booth's Kidney Pills."

Price 50 cents per box. The R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont., Sole Canadian Agents.

A dozen willing, though unsympathetic, hands aid the drunkard on the sidewalk table, where the bartender poured a pitcher upon pitcher of water over him.

"He ain't hurt none to speak of," said a bystander; then added, with encouraging cheer:

"He'll say, there's a man in this here camp!"

CHAPTER VI.

"Who's your new shift boss?" Glenister inquired of his partner one day a few days later, indicating a man in the cut below, intent on setting a line of sluices.

"That's old Slapjack Simms, friend of mine from up Juneau way."

Glenister looked inquisitively, for the object was unusually tall and loose jointed and wore a soiled suit of yellow merchandise. He had laid off his coat, and along the bony, lollipop trousers long perpendicularly from his angular shoulders by suspenders of alarming frailty. His legs were lost in gum boots, also loose and cavernous, and his entire seat of being appeared to flap. He was by no means Apollolike. His face was overgrown with a grizzled tangle that looked as though it had been trimmed with hattiopside scissors, while above the bench loop grandly soared a shiny, dome-like bald.

"He's be always been baldy!"

"Naw! He ain't bald at all. He shaves his head. In the early days he wore a long down mane which was inhabited by crickets, tree toads and such fauna. It got to be a hobby with him finally, so that he growed superstitious about goin' uncurried and would back into a corner with both guns drawed if a barber came near him. But once Hank—that's his real name—undertook to fry some slapjacks and in givin' the skillet a heave, the dough lit among his forest primeval, jest back of his ears, sot'side down. Hank polluted the gulch with langwidge which no man had ought to keep in himself without it was fumigated. Disrepputableness oozed out through him like sweat through an ice pitcher, an' since then he's been known as Slapjack Simms an' has kept his head shingled smooth as a gun bar'l. He's a good miner, though, ain't none better—an' square as a die."

Sluicing had begun on the Midas. Long sinuous lengths of canvas hose wound down the creek bottom from the dam, like gigantic serpents, while the roll of the stream through the flumes mingled musically with the rush of waters, the tinkle of tools and the song of steel on rock. There were four "strings" of boxes abreast, and the heaving line of shovelers ate rapidly into the creek bank, while teams with scrapers splashed through the tail races a an atmosphere of softened profanity. In the big white tents on the creek bank from the bluffs, fifty men of the night shift were asleep, for there is no respite here—no night, no Sunday, no halt, during the hundred days in which the northland lends herself to pillage.

The mine lay cradled between wonderful, mossy, willow mottled mountains, while above and below the gulch were dotted with tents and cabins everywhere, from basin to hill crest, men dug and blasted, ponily, patiently, while their tracks grew slowly back

The whole bewildering panorama of the new Hat fashions will stand revealed in our Millinery Dept. The predominant modes of Paris and the clever conceptions of American artist Milliners will be represented in a magnificent showing of superb Hats. And side by side with these, faithful copies of models originally costing five times our prices, made by our own deft-fingered designers. It will be a showing out-rivalling in breadth and beauty any ever before presented in Napanee.

In Coats, Suits, Skirts and Waists, also, it will be an exposition of the new. Every department is resplendent in new merchandise. SPECIAL ILLUMINATED SHOWING IN THE EVENING. Bring your visitors to the Evening Exhibition. Ready 7.30 p.m.

The New Coats will delight you; Important Display of the Best Styles.

The style tendencies that dominate the Coat situation are charming, refined and becoming. Though all the Coats mirror the same tendencies, their styles are as varied as you please. Scores of models to choose from in scores of weaves and many colorings. Enough to afford satisfying and becoming choice to the most particular. And as to a price standpoint—our showing is equally diversified—Cloth Coats from $5.00 to $50.00, and every Coat, no matter the price, a masterpiece of perfect style and skilled tailoring. Ours is the leading showing—you'll agree with us when you come and see.

WAISTS FOR FALL.

Waists that have real style—net waists, tailored waists and many other popular effects that veritably do credit to the designing genius which created them. They are beautifully made and elaborately trimmed in scores of new and decidedly pretty styles. Our prices, too, add to their attractiveness.

FALL SKIRT STYLES.

The Skirts are more full fashioned and a trifle longer than was the style last summer. The "Directoire" closed panel effect is much in evidence and circular and gored models are most favored. There is one best way to become acquainted with the correct Skirt styles for Fall, and that is to view the splendid showing at this store.

LACES AND TRIMMINGS.

Pretty Ribbons in pleasing color mixtures for Collars and Belts; others in all shades, widths and materials for every purpose. Braids, buttons, novelties of every description for trimmings, to enhance the beauty of that new Fall garment and match the other details of its making.

This Fall's Most Fashionable Dress Goods and Silks in a wide variety

"Diversity" is a feature of our Dress Goods and Silk exhibit. Every new fabric idea, every new weave effect, every fashionable color scheme is represented in our showings. A more stylish, satisfying or complete an assortment cannot be found anywhere hereabout.

Here are Chevron Stripes, Chiffon Broadcloths, Panamas, etc., in the very latest colorings and as reliable and dependable in quality as the best looms produce. Prices are fair, of course.

Beautiful Millinery Exhibit—Displays of Garments,

Dress Fabrics, Requisites, Carpets and Housefurnishings.

What a wealth of Millinery beauty awaits your inspection here to-morrow! What infinite variety! What richness, grace and elegance. The whole bewildering panorama of the new Hat fashions will stand revealed in our Millinery Dept. The predominant modes of Paris and the clever conceptions of American artist Milliners will be represented in a magnificent showing of superb Hats. And side by side with these, faithful copies of models originally costing five times our prices, made by our own deft-fingered designers. It will be a showing out-rivalling in breadth and beauty any ever before presented in Napanee.

In Coats, Suits, Skirts and Waists, also, it will be an exposition of the new. Every department is resplendent in new merchandise. Carpets, Rugs, Housefurnishings, Dress Goods, Silks, Linens, Trimmings—new and beautiful—all will be ushered in to-morrow and presented to an admiring host of our patrons and their friends.

This Opening will be the Authorative Style Show for this Vicinity. You are invited. Come.

SPECIAL ILLUMINATED SHOWING IN THE EVENING. Bring your visitors to the Evening Exhibition. Ready 7.30 p.m.

The New Coats will delight you; Important Display of the Best Styles.

The style tendencies that dominate the Coat situation are charming, refined and becoming. Though all the Coats mirror the same tendencies, their styles are as varied as you please. Scores of models to choose from in scores of weaves and many colorings. Enough to afford satisfying and becoming choice to the most particular. And as to a price standpoint—our showing is equally diversified—Cloth Coats from $5.00 to $30.00, and every Coat, no matter the price, a masterpiece of perfect style and skilled tailoring. Ours is the leading showing—you'll agree with us when you come and see.

WAISTS FOR FALL.

Waists that have real style—net waists, tailored waists and many other popular effects that veritably do credit to the designing genius which created them. They are beautifully made and elaborately trimmed in scores of new and decidedly pretty styles. Our prices, too, add to their attractiveness.

FALL SKIRT STYLES.

The Skirts are more full fashioned and a trifle longer than was the style last summer. The "Directoire" closed panel effect is much in evidence and circular and gored models are most favored. There is one best way to become acquainted with the correct Skirt styles for Fall, and that is to view the splendid showing at this store.

LACES AND TRIMMINGS.

Pretty Ribbons in pleasing color mixtures for Collars and Belts; others in all shades, widths and materials for every purpose. Braids, buttons, novelties of every description for trimmings to enhance the beauty of that new Fall garment and match the other details of its making.

This Fall's Most Fashionable Dress Goods and Silks in a wide variety

"Diversity" is a feature of our Dress Goods and Silk exhibit. Every new fabric idea, every new weave effect, every fashionable color scheme is represented in our showings. A more stylish, satisfying or complete an assortment cannot be found anywhere hereabout.

Here are Chevron Stripes, Chiffon Broadcloths, Panamas, etc., in the very latest colorings and as reliable and dependable in quality as the best looms produce. Prices are fair, of course.

O'NEIL—SMITH.

An interesting event took place on Tuesday, Sept. 8th, at All Saints Church, Vernon, B.C., when two of their popular young townspeople were united in marriage. The ceremony, which took place at noon, was performed by the Rector, the Rev. Rural Dean Lamtert, the contracting parties being Mr. Charles Smith and Miss Adelaide O'Neil, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James O'Neil, Napanee. The groom's brother, Mr. Alfred Smith, acted as best man, and Miss Grace Baker made a charming bridesmaid. The bride was very becomingly gowned, and immediately at the conclusion of the ceremony the young couple drove over to Armstrong, where they took the train on their honeymoon journey to Calgary and Banff.

BULLOCK—GLOVER.

On Wednesday, Sept. 16th, the home of Mrs. David C. Bullock, Brighton, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when her daughter, Agnes Ethel, was married to Dr. William Everson Glover, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Glover, of Camden East. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. Clarence C. Bullock, looked very pretty in a princess gown of white Liberty satin, with veil and orange blossoms. The bridal bouquet was of white roses and maiden hair fern. Miss Helena Bullock, the bridesmaid, was gowned in pale blue taffeta silk and carried a shed of pink asters. The bridal party entered the drawing room to the strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, played by Miss Ethel Maynard of Campbellford. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. T. C. Gliddon, B.A., brother of the groom, in the presence of only the near relatives of the contracting parties. Dr. and Mrs. Glover left on the six o'clock train for Rochester, Albany, and other cities, and on their return will reside in Brighton. Mrs. Glover will receive with the brother on the afternoon and evening of October 11th. The groom's present to the bride was a handsome gold watch and chain, to the bridesmaid a pearl ring, and to the groomsman a pearl scarf pin. Many beautiful gifts were received.

OBITUARY.

Camden has lost one of its old and respected citizens in the person of Geo. W. Fox, who died Sept. 18th, aged seventy-eight years. Deceased was born in New York State and came to Canada when young. He was stricken with paralysis about ten years ago, and has since been a helpless invalid. He leaves a wife and five sons, Marcus, George, Franklin and John, of Millam, Alta., and Lewis, at home. He was a life long Methodist, and was of a kindly disposition and was much esteemed by neighbors and friends, as shown by the large concourse of people who met at the residence to pay him their last respects. The funeral services were held in Camden Y. church, on Sunday, 20th inst., by Rev. Geo. McConnell, who delivered an impressive and instructive sermon from Numbers 23, 10, "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like His." The remains were placed in Centreville vault, later to be interred in the family plot in Camden V. cemetery.

BILL NYE AND THE ENGLISHMAN.

An acquaintance of mine reported to me," said Mr. Nye, "that he had asked an Englishman how he liked the story. 'Not at all,' not at all'" was the reply. "That fellow Nye doesn't know what he's about. There wasn't any Regent Street then, you know."

We understand there are no civil cases entered.

Francis Gonnyea, of the Township of Kaladar, is in gaol, having been committed by Magistrates J. M. Dafoe and W. G. Magistrate Dafoe informs us that very careful consideration was given to the charges by himself and his colleague and that there was great excitement in the north country. Strange to say the threats are alleged to have been made by the prisoner against his father, Mr. V. G. Wilson has been appointed by the Attorney General as Crown Counsel.

Sir Charles Tupper Sends Open Letter to Sir Wilfrid

FORMER CONSERVATIVE LEADER ADDRESSES LETTER TO THE PREMIER

Winnipeg, September 13—Sir Charles Tupper has issued to the public the following open letter to Sir Wilfrid Laurier:

Bathurst, Mass., Sept. 9th, 1905.

To the Right Honorable, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, G. C. M. G.

Ottawa, Ont.

Dear Sir Wilfrid—In your recent speech at Sorel, you said that the reference to myself. My old friend, Sir Charles Tupper, who after many years of battle has withdrawn from the struggle, has come out from his retreat to produce that delusion. He has done this regularly since 1896.

I do not know what you mean by my "many defeats." As I was elected in my native County of Cumberland seven times and twice in Cape Breton, being defeated only once there—and, by the way, having decided practically all my efforts in other constituencies. If you refer to the "defeats" of my party, which entered the country in 1867, 1872, 1878, 1891, 1882 and 1891, I would remind you that the Liberal party has only been successful in the elections of 1874, 1896, 1900 and 1904. It is a matter of history that the Liberal party came into power in 1874 by giving effect to their opponents' views in the Cabinet; and that in 1878 you defeated the Conservative party by denouncing the Government for not having the disallowed the Manitoba School Act which took effect the rights of the Province, and when the Government brought in a measure declared treasonable by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council to restore those rights, you joined with the Opposition in defeating that measure by obstructing a large majority of the House of Commons, and in order to secure the support of Quebec by declaring that you did not go far enough, and that you obtained power you would, if necessary to secure the restoration of the separate schools in Manitoba.

In 1900 you maintained your position by standing under that all the principles for which your party had pledged, and resting upon the support of your race and religion.

In 1904 you sustained by standing upon the country a gigantic delusion for the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, which you declared would involve a charge of $13,000,000 on the people of the Dominion, whereas it has now been proved that the cost will be nearly $200,000,000.

NEGOTIATION OF TREATIES.

Your statement that you had achieved something in the negotiation of treaties not previously obtained requires no notice from me, as it has been already emphatically contradicted by the declarations of the Colonial Secretary, Lord Derby in the House of Lords, and by Sir Edward Grey in the House of Commons, who said the Under-Secretary in the Foreign Office when I negotiated the treaty with France in 1893, and in now Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. He said, in the House of Commons, that "The Plenipotentiaries for the conclusion of the Commercial Convention between France and Canada, of September 19th, 1907, were Sir Frances Bertie, H. M. Ambassador at Paris, the Hon. W. S. Fielding, and the Hon. L. P. Brodeur. They were not appointed by letters patent, that were furnished with full powers under the Royal Sign Manual similar mutatis mutandis to those furnished to the late Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, and to Sir Charles Tupper in 1893." Nor must it be forgotten that by boasting of what you had accomplished for Canada, you have pigeonholed the adoption of your treaty up to the present time, and that the only treaty inexistence to-day is that negotiated by me in 1893.

THE ALL-RED LINE.

You claim great credit for your efforts to secure the All-Red Line. Here as you should apologize for killing that very enterprise after I had secured the British Government a subsidy of $75,000 a year for ten years, and made a contract with the Messrs. Allan, of Montreal and Glasgow which would have given a 20-knot service to Montreal in summer and Halifax in winter, on the 1st day of May, 1896.

Your claim that you have promoted harmony between different classes and religions, is best answered by your speech at Richmond, Nova Scotia, when you were obliged to admit that you found greater harmony between those of different races and religions in Nova Scotia than in any other part of Canada. I read that admission with much pleasure, as from the first hour of my public life I had made equal rights for all, irrespective of race and creed, a cardinal principle.

Allow me now to tell you on what I base the opinion I expressed when asked what I thought would be the result of the impending General Election. The political history of Canada shows that all our great prosperity is due to the policy of the Liberal-Conservative party, carried in the very teeth of the most bitter and persistent opposition of the Liberal party.

No intelligent man can be found who can question the fact that our present position has been attained by Confederation, the adoption of a protective policy, and the construction of an interoceanic railway.

SOME POLITICAL HISTORY.

The proposal to complete the confederation of British North America by the inclusion of British Columbia on the only terms by which that could be attained, giving that province railway communication with the rest of Canada, was fiercely denounced by the Liberal party as ruinous. The result of this opposition was a large reduction of the Conservative majority in the election of 1872, and the party thus weakened was defeated in 1873 by the action of six of its supporters, who thus obtained seats in the Liberal Cabinet.

The Liberal Government then formed dissolved the House, and obtained a large majority. They pursued a Free Trade policy which brought the country to a deplorable condition. The Opposition pursued a protective policy, and carried the country in 1878 by an overwhelming majority. That policy was established in the law of the most determined opposition. The increasing prosperity enabled the Government to vigorously prosecute the construction of the railway to the Pacific Ocean. In April, 1880, Mr. Blake, the leader of the Liberal party, moved a resolution in the House of Commons to compel the Government to suspend all construction beyond the Eastern side of the Rocky Mountains, and implored the House not to ruin Canada for the sake of 12,000 white people in British Columbia. He was supported on that motion by the entire Liberal party, including myself. In October of that year the Government registered into a contract with the Pacific Railway syndicate for the completion of the railway, and it was passed by a majority from seventy to seventy-five. That contract was strenuously opposed by the Liberal party, although in many respects it was considered a most liberal one, as it provided for the construction of more than 3,000 miles of railway, and gave the Government the right of purchasing the road on very favorable terms, and also secured communication between Canada and the Pacific Ocean. That right I am well aware that without the aid of the railway and the policy which established it, Canada would not have been able to maintain the position it now occupies.

UNRESTRICTED RECIPROCITY.

But I must not forget to call your attention to an important statement in the British Empire was made by Mr. Chamberlain, when he was in Canada, in reference to unrestricted reciprocity between Canada and the United States. He said: "Such a proposition is impossible, and would not exist under fiscal autonomy, and would be inconsistent with the existence of the British Empire." You know as well as I that Republicanism and Democracy have combined in the United States to defeat the adoption by Canada of Unrestricted Reciprocity with England. The Liberal party have declared Canada and united to go to Washington to secure

COWS WORTH KEEPING

In three herds in the North Oxford, Ont., cow testing association some good records were made in the last regular monthly test. The cow gave 1416 lbs. milk testing 3.1 per cent fat, and two other cows in two other herds each gave over 1500 lbs. milk testing 3.0 and 4.0 per cent fat.

In the Bagnotville cow association in each of the six herds recorded there were individual cows giving over 1000 lbs. milk, all of them testing 3.0 and over.

Ormstown, Que., also had a good record, for in 10 herds tested some of the cows gave 1000 lbs. milk, one went as high as 1119 lbs. milk testing 3.6, and cows are well worth keeping. But the fact remains unfortunately that there are probably hundreds of cows in Canada that are not worth keeping.

For instance in the Dundas (Ont.) association 11 cows in one herd gave a yearly yield of 127 lbs. of butter fat in the month, but in an adjoining farm 11 cows put cows to give this lbs. of fat during the same time. Think of it half as many cows made as much butter, and provide accommodation for and feed the poor cows for nearly half the year. The work of these associations helps farmers to discover the cows that are worth keeping, and enables them to get rid and dispose of the unprofitable animal at a much better figure.

OPERA HOUSE, KINGSTON.

Beautiful and wonderful is the promise of the Shubert Brothers production of "What Happened Then," the fantastic musical play to be presented by the De Wolf Hopper Opera Company. Though simple and child like in fairy-atmosphere, its proportions are enormous. The scenery and property equipment is so massive that four large cars are needed for transportation. The working staff on the stage must be double that which is usual, the orchestra must be augmented, and upwards of one hundred players are required to tell the story. The argument of the play is a continuation of the legend of the Pied Piper of Hamelin. Mr. Hopper will play the Pied Piper, who, as may be remembered is at the period of the romance over three hundred years old and has presided over fifteen generations of the descendants of the Babes of Hamelin who were decoyed into the mountain by the music of his pipes. The spectacle will be given at the Grand Opera House in Kingston, on Monday, Sept. 23rd.

NEWBURGH.

Although the Methodist church Jubilee celebration is still over two weeks in the future the preparatory arrangements are already almost complete. Energetic committees of the church Trustee Board and the ladies of the congregation have been hard at work in developing plans for the success of the celebration, and all indications point to a most favorable issue. The official announcement of the event has been printed and copies mailed to a number of former members of the congregation of this historic church, now resident in widely distant parts of the continent from Montreal to California. The official programme, with sketch of the history of the church is in the hands of the press this week. This is being produced in artistic style and containing, as it does, a number of cuts of those who have been prominent in the history of the church, it will serve as a valuable souvenir of the Jubilee. These programmes will be disposed of at a nominal price to cover expense of publication. The committee have been much disappointed in having to release from their premises the art gallery in the Jubilee supper on the 19th, Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, who will of necessity be in attendance that day at the Dominion nomination in South York. His Honor Chief Justice G. R. Dernobe, of Belleville, also an old Newburgh boy, and a benefactor of the Church, has consented to take the place of the Minister of Justice on that occasion, and will be a most worthy substitute. Fuller announcement of the complete programme will be made next week. For the service on Oct. 11th, Rev. D. O. Crossley, of Whitby, a much beloved former pastor of this circuit, will be present and in the morning the service will be made the occasion of the Anniversary of the Sunday Schools of the circuit Services for the day will be withdrawn at Switzerville, Shannonley and Strathcona. In the evening will be the Epworth League anniversary. At this service Miss Horton, of Napanee, will sing two solos. The ladies have entered enthusiastically into their arrangements for the Jubilee Fowl Supper on the 19th, and in anticipation of a record crowd, are planning large things. They may be relied upon to make this event a record-breaker. Much kind ever held in this part of the country. The thankoffering in connection with the celebration is also creating much interest, and a grate ful people will no doubt be enthusiastic. The first contribution to this offering was received last week from Mr. J. F. Mears, of Welcome.

An Athletic Association for the year has been organized at the High School, with the following officers:—Press, Arthur Embertz; Vice-President, Ward Wagar; Secretary, Sherwell Committee, Day Spafford, Archie Babcock, Clark Chadsey and Earl Kennedy. A football club was organized with Percy Nesbitt as captain. The first match of the season will be held on the afternoon of Oct. 9th, on the palace grounds, when a good, clean sport is assured.

On Saturday last the death occurred at the home of her brother-in-law, Mr. Herbert Sexsmith, north of the village. The funeral was held on Tuesday, and the remains taken to Marysville for interment.

Mr. J. F. Peck left on Saturday for Toronto to resume his work at Osgoode Hall.

Mrs. Bradford Fullerton is seriously ill at his home here.

Clerk Wellman has the Collector's roll for the village ready to be placed in the hands of the collector. This is a record even for our hustling clerk.

There is little election excitement. No public meetings are yet announced for this large and influential community.

Miss Martin will open her store on Thursday next with a large and beautiful collection of Fall and Winter millinery. Call and see them, Oct. 6th. Bring your old fall hat and have it trimmed over. Also bring them over, and making them look like new. Winter coats and furs also on hand. 40a

LETTER FROM NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Hanover, New Hampshire,
September 23th, 1908.

To the Editor of Napanee Beaver :—

Dear Sir.—Would you like to hear a little about the old granite state ?

Grandma and I came here the latter part of August, and we like the country very much. It is situated in the Switzerland of America, and is very beautiful with its mountains, green valleys and broad rivers. Hanover is a college town, and very old, but I will write about that later.

I want to write you about the fair we attended the next morning after we came here. We climbed "Dewey's Hill," which, quite a while before we saw any climbing in the fog. Then the first thing we saw were the tops of the tree tops, which appeared to be up in the sky. Then we saw the Velvet Rock. This hill not far from us. Presently clambs called us to the other side of the hill, and then we saw the prettiest sight Up in the sky at what seemed to be, we found we hills at mile—below them the thick fog. Then underneath we could see beautiful green fields and farm houses, after awhile the fog began to lift and then we could see the tops of the trees which appeared to be up in the sky. LETTER FROM NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Hanover, New Hampshire,
September 23rd, 1901.

To the Editor of Napanee Review :

Dear Sir—Should you like to hear a little about the old granite state? Well, Grandpa and I came here the latter part of August, and we like the country very much. It is called the Switzerland of America, and is very beautiful with its mountains, green valleys and broad rivers. Hanover is a college town, and very old, but I will write about it later.

I want to write you about the fair we watched the next morning after we came here. We climbed "Dewey's Hill" which overlooks Hanover, and we saw there quite a while before we saw any thing to see. Then the first thing we saw were the tops of two gas meters, which appeared to be up in the air. Then we saw a band of men, but it was a little hill not far from us. Presently grandpa called us to the other side of the hill, and then we saw the prettiest sight I ever saw in this world. Right round for we could see hills and hills below from the block but then suddenly it was quite beautiful green fields and farm houses after awhile the land began to fall and then we could see Dewey's Hill which overlooks Hanover. Then we could see Hanover. First, came Fair ground, then where many of the people lived, then the park, and then the rest of the town came gradually into view. It really was a beautiful sight.

We had breakfast early on a train and we left Lebanon about five and a half hours after. It is a large city and is the residence part of a very attractive town. Mr. Richardson is Riverside Park and passed very pretty Canadian residence in Lebanon. Most of the houses are built of brick and have very pretty lawns and flower gardens in front. There are also some factories and foundries. We came through Lebanon and Hanover in a very fine summer resort and by Kinsman's Notch, which is very fine. We are living about about a mile long with small houses on each side. It is very pretty and a wicked walk. The street is shaded all along with fine old elms and a wide, public, tumbling brook runs through the middle of the street. There have a very fine book library in Elm. It has a detached roof that and cost $1,000. We will write later about Hanover. Ont

VISITATION AND CONFIRMATION AT ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH.

The most Revd. Chas. H. Gauthier, Archbishop of Kingston, accompanied by His Secretary, Rev. James O'Reilly, and the Rev. John Kehoe, arrived in Napanee from Gananoque on Sunday last and were met at the station by the local pastor, Revd. Father O'Connor, the church committee, and a number of prominent citizens of the town. His Grace was driven to the church, where he made his official entrance. The beautiful church was packed to the doors with a full congregation to welcome their chief pastor. After the usual prayers, His Grace addressed a few words to the people assembled, and made the announcements of visitation.

On following morning, after the celebration of Holy Mass by Rev. Father Kehoe, pastor of Gananoque, His Grace confirmed the candidates for confirmation to the number of thirty, having previously examined them in their catechism and the doctrine of their religion. He afterwards delivered a masterly address, particularly dwelling on the evil effects of mixed marriages, and in opposition to this evil he showed he was sustained by a number of eminent ministers of every denomination. The Archbishop took occasion to express his profound satisfaction at the surprising knowledge the candidates for confirmation gave of their catechisms' answers, and the doctrines of their holy faith; congratulating the pastor and trustees on this evidence of their zeal and labour. He also expressed in the highest terms of pleasure he felt in coming to Napanee, and extended his heartfelt thanks to the congregation for their generous and self-sacrificing co-operation with their pastor in the formation of the new Parish. This was evidenced in the splendid and substantial improvements made around the church and presbytery.

The choir, under the leadership of the Rev. Pastor, Father O'Connor, and Miss Nellie Mathewson, as organist, sang in a splendid manner, both at the Sunday evening, and at High Mass Monday morning, being ably assisted by Mrs. Wm. Gannon, of Kingston. Before concluding His Grace exacted from the candidates for confirmation two promises, first, to abstain from all intoxicating liquors until they had attained the age of 21 individually, and second, to attend catechism for the whole year from this date.

Rarely has the Church of St. Patrick looked more beautiful. The altars and statuary were artistically decorated with out flowers and interspersed with lighted floats, the whole presenting an inspiring and devotional feeling. The decorations were under the direction of Miss Josephine Leamy and Mrs. Vincent Konvey, and members of the Altar Society. The Archbishop left the following day for St. Boniface, Man., for the dedication of the Cathedral of that place on the 4th Oct.

International Newspaper Bible Study Club

GOLD AND SILVER MEDALS, BIBLES, BOOKS.

Persons may join the Club at any time during the year, but must, of course, answer the 13 questions appearing regularly to qualify for the prizes. It is, however, desirable that the papers be answered as the lessons are studied.

The International Newspaper Bible Study Club is for the purpose of promoting, in an unsectarian way among the masses, a wider study of the Bible, the basal truths of Christianity, and the joyful study and use of all the precious promises of God's Word.

Any one who joins a Local Club, and takes up the same course herein outlined, may secure only ordained clergymen. We have the unqualified endorsement of the clergy, but it is not considered fair to have them compete for the prizes. Sunday School teachers, Bible class scholars, and church-goers generally may belong to the Newspaper Club, also non-churchgoers, of all shades of opinion. All such who have not joined are warmly invited to do so and to compete for the prizes.

The Newspaper Bible Study Club publish the International Sunday School Lesson questions by Rev. Dr. Linscott, which have aroused so much interest elsewhere, and their will appear weekly. One of these questions each week is to be answered in writing, and upon these answers the prizes are to be awarded.

The Beaver is authorized to form a Local Newspaper Bible Study Club for its readers, and guarantees to all who join and fulfil the conditions, that everything herein promised shall be faithfully carried out.

CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST.

1. Each contestant, or his or her family, must be a subscriber to this paper, during the continuance of the contest, in order to qualify for membership in the International Newspaper Bible Study Club and this Local Club.

2. Each contestant in this Local Club must answer each of the written questions, for 52 consecutive weeks, commencing for Sunday, August 2nd, 1908, and the answers must all be in the possession of this paper within two weeks of the close of this period, or they will not be entered for the prizes, and the contest will be void.

3. Each question must be answered separately, and the paper written on one side only. No answer must exceed two hundred words in length and may be less. It will be a convenience if students will write their answers on letter paper, about 41 inches by 11 inches.

4. Each contest must have the name and address of the writer at the bottom of the answer, and the name of contestant's number, registered and then the name cut off so the examiner may know it by number only.

5. Students should be careful to understand the question before answering. To do this, the lesson text must be read and especially the verse upon which the question is based.

6. The answers from this Local Club must be delivered to the office, and the envelope sealed at the close of the month, and forwarded to headquarters for independent examination by competent examiners. The prizes will then be awarded according to the highest number of marks, and the members of The International Newspaper Bible Study Club prizes will be awarded to members of this Local Club in accordance with rules from this office.

THE PRIZES.

First Series—A gold medal to each of the first five contestants.

Second Series—A silver medal to each of the next five contestants.

Third Series—A Teacher's Bible, price $5.00, to each of the next five contestants.

Fourth Series—The book "The Birth of Christianity," price $1.50, to each of the fourth five contestants.

Fifth Series—A developed mind, an expanded knowledge of the Bible, a broadened and more profound knowledge of the Bible and of life, to all who complete the course of study, winning any of the above prizes.

Each medal will be suitably engraved, giving the name of the winner, and for what it is awarded, and in like manner each Bible and book will be inscribed.

All who can write, and have ideas, are urged to take up these studies regardless of the decree of their education, as the papers are not valued from an educational or literary standpoint, but from the point of view of the sagacity of their production.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON BY REV. DR. LINSCOTT FOR THE INTERNATIONAL NEWSPAPER BIBLE STUDY CLUB FOR OCT. 4th, 1908.

"Study to Shew Thyself Approved unto God." II Sam. ii.

Golden Text—Enter into the joy of thy lord. Matt. xxv. 23.

Verses 1-3—Which should always be the guiding motive in an ordinary struggle, education, legislation, business or religion? Is the highest aim of the glory of God, and personal religion, the first place in their affections and practice? Is there any that presumably imply that no other aim is worthy of a man?

If so much is right, educated, successful and popular, but neglected Christ's call to duty, and spiritual religion, what does it gain, or lose, as a result?

Verse 3—Is it only and all in all in Christ to worship God with the aid of a brass or of string band?

What has been the result upon the moral and spiritual life of the Salvation Army, and the band music of the Salvation Army?

Is cultured music a help to real soul worship?

Judging from actual experience, are our up-to-date and musically educated choirs a help or a hindrance to making converts to Christianity?

Verses 4-6—Can we give from after all, put up his hand to steady the Ark; now in what did the sin of Uzzah consist in so to serve a death penalty?

This question must be answered in writing by the members of the club. Consult the commentary of some evangelical clergyman, if not able to answer to your own satisfaction.

When a man wants to improve upon God's methods and ordinances, usually he does not succeed—the leading heading for doctrine, what difference does it make, if his folly and that of Uzzah is the same?

Verses 8-10—Sometimes with one single act a man contracts a debt, that clings to him and it results in his death; is there anything in such a circumstance to justify the onlooker angry with God?

Did David act with wisdom or others wise in being displeased with God for his destruction of Uzzah?

When we see or hear of great natural calamities, such as earthquakes, tornadoes, fires, etc., with great destruction of life and property, what fact should our attitude be toward God?

Verses 11—Take a town rich in its manufactures, in its general trade, in its thriving advantages, with no churches; and a similar town with churches, and then compare the two in all that goes to make life worth living, and state the results of your comparison.

Does God invariably bless the home, and the community in which are to be found the Ark of the Lord?

Verses 12-16—What is invariably the result of building a church, starting a Sunday School, or organizing a Bible class, Christian Endeavor, etc.?

Which is the better plan, to start out to conduct public worship with the ordinary entertainments and attractions to help motions to match, or with our present regular silence and outward inactivity?

Verses 17-18—Is God pleased with any people worship when the chief object is for personal blessing, and with but little thought to help the poor and needy, or to save the lost shown by giving our money for that purpose?

Verses 20-23—Did you ever know any person to have spiritual children, who made a display or despised religious enthusiasm in others?

Stubborn Indigestion.

One Who Had Suffered for Years Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

The symptoms of stomach trouble vary. Some victims have a ravenous appetite, while others loathe the sight of food. Often there is a feeling as of weight on the chest, a dull feeling in the throat. With others there is an intense pain and feeling of nausea after eating. Sometimes gas presses on the heart and leads the sufferer to think he has heart disease. Sick headache is another frequent and distressing symptom.

Mr. Alex. McKay, McLellan's Mountain, N.S., says:—"For several I was a great sufferer from indigestion, which was gradually growing worse and worse, and it would be impossible for me to tell how much suffering I endured. At different times I had treatment from three good doctors but it did not help me in the least. Then I began trying all sorts of advertised medicines and took ten packages of one medicine sweetally in the hope that it would do me better results. I had practically come to regard myself as incurable, and to feel that I would be a continuous sufferer, when one day I read in a newspaper of the cure of indigestion through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I made up my mind to give them a trial. I have never been sorry for the step I took, nearly five boxes before they began to help me, but I did not slacken in my use of them, and by the time I had used about a dozen boxes all my troubles had disappeared, and they were completely. I can now eat anything we like and the fact that I am free from pain, have no longer the pains and discomfort after meals that I used to have. It is several years now since I was cured, and I have never felt a symptom of indigestion since. I am well known in this locality, and you are quite at liberty to use what I say in the hope that it will benefit some other sufferer."

All medicine dealers sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LETTER FROM THE NORTH WEST.

Edmonton, Alta., Sept. 21st, 1908.

Dear Sir:—As a reader of The Beaver during my residence in Napanee, I would like to give your readers some idea of the condition of the labor market here in the West.

According to the advertisement issued by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, 25,000 men were required to help in the harvest in the North West, and "Good Wages for Harvesters" was the heading of the ad.

On arrival at Saskatoon I found there were at least 400 unemployed harvesters seeking employment, and I can vouch for the state of affairs in the majority of the cities in the West.

The following statement appeared in the Nunnez, Manitoba, Free Press, on August 29th last, and truthfully sums up the situation throughout the North West:—"Harvesters Lack Food and Shelter—Two hundred harvesters are out of work in Regina, and in a destitute condition. The men allege that they have been misled as to the conditions existing there, and that on the part of the C.P.R. in stimulating the story broadcast in the need of an enormous number of harvest hands in the West. 150 men were forwarded in Saskatchewan, and the railway company have already shipped over 2,000 into the province, and there are two more train loads to come."

As regards the wages, they are the same in this district where agents are offering $1.25 for experienced men and $1 for others. If there are high wages may I ask what for I have not seen them in the course of the C.P.R. I am, dear Sir,

Yours truly,
EDGAR W. SHAWAN.

CASTORIA.

1908 AND 1909

Twelve years over the Liberals had practically all the Provinces. The past year has swept all this away. Ontario is full of ideals and cheers Tomlin at the last four of the Provinces remaining. Some political experts say that Canada is much weaker in the provinces, is lethargic, divided, casual, fickle, a drags, dominated by machine and camp followers, and priding itself on the not on that nothing counts but power and numbers. At the next Liberal convention in Toronto the road will be 25,000 men in Ontario who formerly voted Liberal had voted for Conservative candidates in the recent Provincial election.

What has caused this complete change? What has caused the path blind with the enemy and the Liberals to be unable to become so like a wayward up midnight, and the Liberals to be unable to do? It has not been because of the efficient of the order of the men, the youth men particularly, who worked so hard for the Liberals, and looked so much from it in the years before 1896. Nor was it because they were then so young that the campaign of 1896 was the best fought out of all in politics. The Conservative party was in the feeling of all the ministers of the ten years of office. The Red was pure, desperately poor, and under the thumb of bonds of abuses that the old Government had fabricated.

Liberal men were badly organized, and overrun with corruption. Many valuable Conservatives existed that could be relied on in the Liberal ranks. In the East the Laurier-Sifton Trade alliance was because the West stood still. There was unfortunate talk of waste and robbery and nepotism. And, last of all, there was the attempt to coerce Manitoba in an affair that was her own.

This was the state of affairs, and young men and old men, too, went into the fighting fight believing that once the Liberals were in power, all these things would be swept away. And one thing was done. The Liberals were put into power

International Newspaper Bible Study Club

GOLD AND SILVER MEDALS, BIBLES, BOOKS.

Persons may join the Club at any time during the year, but, of course, answers to the 25 questions hereinafter explained, to qualify for the prizes, must be received before that the questions be answered as the lessons are studied.

The International Newspaper Bible Study Club is for the purpose of promoting in an unsectarian way among the masses, a wider study of the Bible, the basis of true Christianity, and the problems which enter into the world's life. It is composed of all those who join a Local Club, and take the published questions and lessons. Each Local Club has appointed correspondent, in sympathetic co-operation of the latter, but it is also considered fair to have them compete for the prizes. Sunday School teachers, Bible class scholars, and others generally, may belong to this Newspaper Club, also non-churchgoers. All shades of opinion. All such who have not joined are warmly invited to do so and to compete for the prizes.

The Bravery has secured the right to publish the International Sunday School Lesson questions by next Saturday's issue, and the answers will appear weekly. One of these questions each week is to be answered in writing, and upon these answers the prizes are to be awarded.

The Bravery is authorized to form a Local Newspaper Bible Study Club for its readers, and guarantees to all who join and fulfil the conditions, that everything herein promised shall be faithfully carried out.

CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST.

1. Each contestant, or his or her family, must be a subscriber to this paper, during the continuance of the contest, in order to qualify for membership in the International Newspaper Bible Study Club and this Local Club.

2. Each contestant in this Local Club must answer each of the written questions, for 52 consecutive weeks, commencing for Sunday, August 23d, 1908, and the answers must all be in the possession of this paper within the two weeks of the time they are called, which allows two weeks grace after the close of the contest.

3. Each question must be answered separately, on one side of sheets written on one side only. No answer must extend two hundred words in length and may be less. It will be a convenience if students will write their answers on letter paper, about 8½ inches by 11 inches.

4. Each answer must have the name and address of the contestant plainly written at the answer, so it can be identified, given a number, registered and then the name cut off so the examiner may know it by number only.

5. Students should be careful to understand the question before answering. To do this, the lesson text must be read and especially the verse, or verses, upon which the question is based.

6. The awards from this Local Club must be declared in this office, and there will be collected at the close of the contest, and forwarded to the International Bible Study examination by competent examiners. The prizes will then be awarded according to the highest number of marks, with the approval of the International Newspaper Bible Study Club, and prizes which may be awarded to members of this Local Club will be given out from this office.

LESSON OF THE INTERNATIONAL NEWSPAPER BIBLE STUDY CLUB FOR SEPT. 13, 1908.

"David Brings the Ark to Jerusalem." II Sam. 6.

Golden Text—Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise. Ps. c:4.

Verses 1-5—Music should always to the greater living cause to an intelligent people, and not to frivolity and folly as it often is.

If the people give the church of God, and the worship, they will give to it their affections and practical plans, does the church of God exist for the sake of the call it be supported?

If a man is rightly educated, according to God, and personal religion; what does earth, or love, as a result?

Verse 5—Is it comely and is it pure, that we worship God with the aid of a brass or string band?

What does the result upon the moral and spiritual life of the community, the band music of the Salvation Army?

Is cultured music a help to real soul worship?

Judging from actual experience, are up-to-date and musically-modern choirs a help or a hindrance to making converts to Christianity?

Verses 6-7—The Lord slew Uzzah after he put up his hand to steady the Ark; pray, what did the sin of Uzzah consist to deserve a death penalty?

(This question must be answered in writing by the members of the class. Consult a commentary, or some well-informed clergyman, if not able to answer at first sight or consideration.)

When a man wants to improve upon God's method of running the world, and is afraid that everything is heading for destruction, what difference is there between his folly and that of Uzzah?

Verses 10-11—Sometimes with one single act a man contracts an incurable disease, and it remains in his system, in the very thing in such a circumstance to do. A the unclean spirit with it?

Did David act with wisdom or otherwise in being displeased with God for the destruction of Uzzah?

Verse 12—Is a case of great natural calamities, such as earthquakes, tornadoes, fires, etc., with great destruction of life and property, what should our attitude be to ward God?

Verse 19—Take a town such as Hamilton, in its general trade, in its shipping advantages, etc., with a population of similar town with churches added. Prepare for two in all lines to make the most worth living, and state the results of your comparisons.

Does God invariably bless the home and the community in which one to be found?

Does the Holy Ghost ever bless a home?

Verse 21—Pride is invariably the result of building a church, starting a Sunday School, or organizing a Bible Class where there are none?

Which is the better and more natural way to conduct public worship: that with the extime enthusiasm of shoutings with bodily contacts to match, or with our present prudite silence and outward impertinitability?

Verses 17-18—Is God pleased with any public worship where the chief desire is for general blessing, and with but little thought to help the poor and needy, and to bless the latter perhaps by giving out money for their personal use?

Verses 20-23—Did you ever know any person to have scattered children, who made free of or despised religious enthusiasm or others?

Lesson for Sunday, Oct. 11th, 1908. Golden Promise to David. I Chron. xvii.

Mr. Alex. McKay, McLellan's Mountain, Sask., says "For years I was a great sufferer from indigestion, which was gradually growing worse and worse and it would be impossible for me to tell how much suffering I endured. At different times I had treatment from three good doctors but it did not help me in the least. Then I began trying all sorts of advertised medicines and took ten bottles of one medicine specially recommended for dyspepsia, but with no better result. I began to come to the conclusion myself as incurable, and to feel that I would be a continuous sufferer, when one day I read in a newspaper of the cure of indigestion through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I made up my mind to give them a trial. I had tried so many that I was liberty to see what they would help me, but I do not wonder at this as my case was of long standing. I took a dozen boxes of the pills, and they cured me completely. I can now eat anything we raise on the farm for man to eat and have no pain or pains and no discomfort I had endured for years. It is several years now since I was cured, and I have never felt a symptom of indigestion since I am well known in this local ty, and you are quite liberty to use my name and say in the hope that it will benefit some other sufferer."

All medicine dealers sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LETTER FROM THE NORTH WEST.

Edmonton, Alta., Sept. 21st, 1908.

Dear Sir,—As a reader of The Bravery during my residence in Saskatoon, I would like to give your readers some idea of the condition of the labor market here in the West.

According to the advertisement issued by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, 25,000 men were required to help in the harvest in the North West, and "Good Wages for Harvesters" was the heading of the advt.

On arrival at Saskatoon I found there were at least 400 unemployed harvesters seeking employment, and I can vouch for this state of affairs in the majority of the cities in the West.

The following clipping appeared in the Winnipeg, Manitoba, Free Press, of August 29th last, and truthfully sums up the situation throughout the North West:—Harvesters Coming Fast—Many Shelter.—Two hundred harvesters are out of work in Brandon, and in a destitute condition. The men office misrepresentation on the part of the C. P. R., in circulating the glowing broadcast in the east of an enormous demand for harvest hands in the West. 250 men were required in Saskatchewan, and the railway companies have already shipped over 2,000 into the province, and there are two more train loads to come."

As regards "high wages", this year in this district were adding $1.25 for experienced "machine men". If these are high wages, may I ask what the low wages in the green fields are?

I am, dear Sir,

Faithfully yours,

EDGAR B. SHAWAN.

1908 AND 1909.

Twelve years ago the Liberals held practically all the Provinces. The party was compact, aggressive, enthusiastic, full of ideals and energy. Today it has lost four of the Provinces or more than the major part of the population of Canada, is much weaker in the others, is lethargic, divided, cynical, lacking in ideals, dominated by machine men and ramp followers, and paralyzed with the notion that nothing counts but votes and numbers. At the recent Liberal convention in Toronto it was said that 25,000 men in Ontario who formerly voted Liberal had voted for Conservatives in the by-elections in the recent Provincial contest.

What has caused this complete change? What has robbed the party of its high values, the energy and the high ideals of youth, to become so like a worn-out and hopelessly fall of debility and senescence? How it has come about is the story of the rise and decline of the Liberal party of Canada.

Twelve years ago the Liberals were in power in Ontario, in Quebec, in Manitoba, in the Territories, in the Maritime Provinces, and in the Federal Government at Ottawa. They were a compact and united party, with a great record behind them, and with a great opportunity before them. They had been in power for 18 years. They had built the Canadian Pacific Railway, had developed the Territories, had established the principle of provincial autonomy, had given to the Provinces their subsidies, had established provincial governments, had settled the Manitoba school question, had carried the country through the depression of 1873, and had established the National Policy. They had behind them a record of solid achievement, and before them a great opportunity. And last of all, there was the glamour of youth, the glamour that was her own.

This was the state of affairs, and young men and old men, too, went into that long fight, believing that, now the Liberals were in power, the Golden Age would be swept away. The thing was done. The Liberals were put into power. Some reforms were made. The Conservatives in the West was improved — in say than seemed to be necessary. Leading Liberals were taken from the Provinces to form the "Cabinet of Provinces" at Ottawa, but with them seemed to depart the virility of the Provincial governments. There went to the East Manitoba, British Columbia, Ontario, New Brunswick, all turned out by the Liberals. The weaker and baser element that remained after the "elite" had departed for Ottawa were later spewed out of the mouth of the Provinces. But immediately the rejected of the people in the provinces became the elected of the Ottawa Sanctum. The same men who had looked to see the Senate abolished now saw it made the hill of refuge from which those whom they had deposed threatened them. And in such a case would be superhuman. Every Province knows its own bitterness. If they were not made Senators they were made agents or inspectors, or commissioners, or what not, and glamour sardonically and triumphantly at better men than themselves who believed that the Liberal party meant what it said, and who were astonished and disheartened to see it was made the sink into which all the scum offs of the Provinces flowed.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

By REX E. BEACH.

Copyright, 1905, by Rex E. Beach.

The Bronco Kid, familiar from Atlin to Nome as the best "faro" Man in the Yukon, worked the shift from 8 till 2. He was a slender man of thirty, dexterous in movement, slow to smile, soft of voice and known as a living flame among women. He had dealt the biggest games of the early days and had no enemies. Yet, though many called him friend, they wondered fwardly.

It was a strong play the Kid had tonight, for Swede Sam of Dawson ventured many stacks of yellow chips, and he was a quick, aggressive gambler. A Jew sat at the king end with ten neatly creased bank bills before him, together with piles of smaller currency. He adventured viciously and without system, while outsiders to the number of four or five sat in sporadically with small bets. The game was difficult to follow, consequently the lookout, from his raised dais, was leaning forward, chin in hand, while the dreamy eyes was locked about by eager onlookers.

Faro is a closed book to most people, for its intricacies are confusing. Lucky is he who has never persevered in solving its mysteries nor speculated upon the "systems" of beating it. From those who have learned it, the game demands practice, dexterity and coolness. The dealer must run the cards, watch the many shifting bets, handle the neatly piled checks, figure lightningtike thegrofits and losses. It was his unerring, clocklike regularity in this that had won the Kid his reputation. This night his powers were taxed. He dealt silently, scowlingly, his long white fingers nervously caressing the cards.

This preoccupation prevented his noticing the rustle and stir of a newcomer who had crowded up behind him until he caught the wondering glances of those in front and saw that the Israelite was staring past him, his money forgotten, his eyes beady and sharp, his ratlike teeth showing in a grin of admiration. Swede Sam glared from under his unkempt shock and felt uncertainly toward the open collar of his flannel shirt where a kerchief should have been. The men who were standing gazed at the newcomer, some with surprise, others with a half smile of reverential.

Bronco glanced quickly over his shoulder, and as he did so the breath caught in his throat, for only an instant. A girl stood so close beside him that the line of her gown brushed his sleeve. He was shuffling at the moment and dropped a card, then nodded to her, speaking quietly as he stooped to regain the pasteboard:

"Howdy, Cherry?"

She did not answer, only continued to look at the "layout." "What a woman!" he thought. She was not too tall, with smoothly rounded bust and slim and long waist, all well displayed by her perfectly fitting garments. Her face was oval, the mouth rather large, the eyes of gray, dark blue, gracefully outlined under thin, silken lids. Her dull gold hair was combed low over the ears, and her smile showed rows of sparkling teeth before it drifted into twin dimples. Strangest of all, it was the innocent face, the face and smile of a schoolgirl.

The Kid finished his shuffling awkwardly and slid the cards into the box. Then the woman spoke:

"Let me have your place, Bronco."

The man gasped, the Jew snickered, the lookout straightened in his chair.

"Better not, It's a hard game," said the Kid, but her voice was imperious as she commanded him:

"Hurry up. Give me your place."

Bronco arose, whereupon she settled in his chair, tucked in her skirts, removed her gloves and twisted into place the diamonds on her hands.

"What the devil's this?" said the lookout roughly. "Are you drunk, Bronco? Get out of that chair, miss!"

She turned to him slowly. The innocence had fled from her features, and the big eyes flashed warningly. A change had convened her like a pull of air on a still pool. Then, while she stared at him, her lids drooped dangerously and her lip curled.

"Throw him out, Bronco," she said, and her tones held the hardness of a mistress to her slave.

"That's all right," the Kid reassured the lookout. "She's a better dealer than I am. This is Cherry Malotte."

Without noticing the stares this evoked, the girl commenced. Her hands, beautifully soft and white, flashed over the cards with the deadly, unfaltering, ... with the finish of one bred to the cards, handling chips and counting the countless ... ums that spring from long practice. It was seen that she never looked at her cheek rack, but when a bet required paying picked up a stack without turning her head, and they saw further that she never reached twice nor took a large pile and sized it up against its mate, removing the extra disks, as is the custom. When she stretched forth her hand, she grasped the right number unerringly. This is considered the acme of professional finish, and the Bronco Kid smiled delightedly as he saw the wonder spread from the lookout to the spectators and heard the creels of the latter, who sat on chairs and tables for sight of the woman dealer.

For twenty minutes she continued, until the place became congested, and never once did the lookout detect an error.

While she was busy Glenister entered the front door and pushed his way back toward the theater. He was worried and distrait, his manner perturbed and unnatural. Silently and without apparent notice he passed friends who greeted him.

"What ails Glenister tonight?" asked a bystander. "He acts funny."

"Ain't you heard? Why, the Midas has been jumped. He's in a bad way—all broke up."

The girl suddenly ceased without finishing the deck and arose.

"Don't stop," said the Kid, while a murmur of dismay came from the spectators. She only shook her head and drew on her gloves with a show of ennui.

Gliding through the crowd, she threaded about aimlessly, the recipient of many stares though but few greetings, speaking with no one, a certain dignity serving her as a barrier even here. She stopped a waiter and questioned him.

"He's upstairs in a gallery box."

"Alone?"

"Yes'm. Anyhow, he was a minute ago, unless some of the rustlers has broke in on him."

A moment later Glouister, watching the scene below, was aroused from his gloomy absorption by the click of the box door and the rattle of silken skirts.

"Go out, please," he said, without turning. "I don't want company." Hesiting no answer, he began again, "I came here to be alone"—but there he ceased, for the girl had come forward and laid her two hot hands upon his cheeks.

"Boy," she breathed, and he arose swiftly.

"Cherry! When did you come?"

"Oh, days ago," she said, impatiently, "from Dawson. They told me you had struck it. I stood it as long as I could—then I came to you. Now, tell me about yourself. Let me see you first, quick!"

She pulled him towards the light and gazed upward, observing him hungrily with her great, lustrous eyes. She held to his coat lapels, standing close beside him, her warm breath beating up into his face.

"Well," she said, "kiss me!"

He took her wrists in his and loosed her hold, then looked down on her gravely and said:

"No—that's all over. I told you so when I left Dawson."

"All over! Oh, no, it isn't, boy. You think so, but it isn't—it can't be. I love you too much to let you go."

"Hush!" said he. "There are people in the next box."

"I don't care! Let them hear," she cried, with feminine recklessness. "I'm proud of my love for you. I'll tell it to them—to the whole world."

"Now, see here, little girl," he said quietly, "we had a love talk in Dawson and agreed that it was best to divide our ways. I was mad over you then, as a good many other men have been, but I came to my senses. Nothing could ever result from it, and I told you so."

"Yes, yes; I know. I thought I could give you up, but I didn't realize till you had gone and I started you. Oh, it's been a torture to me every day for the past two years." There was no semblance now to the cold creature she had appeared upon entering the gambling hall. She spoke rapidly, her whole body tense with emotion, her face shaken with passion. "I've seen men and men and men, and they've loved me, but I never cared for anybody in the world till I saw you. They ran after me, but you were cold. You made me come to you." Perhaps that was it. Anyhow, I can't stand it. I'll give up everything. I'll do anything. Just be where you are. What do you think of a woman who will beg? Oh, I've lost my pride! I'm a fool—a fool—but I can't help it!"

"I'm sorry you feel this way," said Glenister. "It isn't my fault, and it isn't of any use."

He turned and she stood quivering, while the light died out of her face; then, with a characteristic change, she smiled till the dimples lurched in her cheeks. She sank upon a seat beside him and pulled together the curtains, leaving just the space, and you can't keep me from loving you."

With his other hand he smoothed her hair, while, enknown to him and beneath her lightness, she shrank and quivered at his touch like a Barbary slave under the whip.

"Things are very bad with me," he said. "We've had our mine jumped."

"I know. You know what to do. You aren't a cripple. You've got five fingers on your gun hand."

"That's it! They all tell me that—all the old timers. But I don't know what to do. I thought I did, but I don't. The law has come into this country, and I've tried to meet it halfway. They jumped us and put in a receiver, a big man by the name of McNamara. Dex wasn't there, and I let them do it. When the old man learned of it, he nearly went crazy. We had our first quarrel. He thought I was afraid"—

"Not he," said the girl. "I know him and he knows you."

"That was a week ago. We've hired the best lawyer in Nome—Bill Wheaton. You know what to do. You aren't a cripple. You've got five fingers on your gun hand."

"That's it! They all tell me that—all the old timers. But I don't know what to do. I thought I did, but I don't. The law has come into this country, and I've tried to meet it halfway. "That was a week ago. We've hired the best lawyer in Nome—Bill Wheaton. You know what to do. You injunction removed. We've offered bond in any sum, but the judge refuses to accept it. He's a crook. We leave to appeal, but he won't give us the right. The more I look into it the worse it looks. The court wasn't convened in accordance with law, we weren't notified to appear in our own behalf, we weren't allowed a chance to argue our own case—nothing. They simply stepped on a receiver, and now they refuse to allow us redress. From a legal standpoint it's appalling. I'm told. But what is to be done? What's the game? That's the thing. What are they up to? I'm nearly out of my mind, for it's all my fault. I didn't think it meant anything like this or I'd have made a fight for possession and stuck them off at least. As it is, my partner's sore and he's gone to drinking—first time in twelve years. He says I gave the claim away, and now it's up to me and the Alaskeny to get it back. If he gets full he'll drive a four horse wagon into some church or go up and pick the judge to pieces with his fingers to see what makes him so round."

"What 've they got against you and Dextry—some grudge?" she questioned.

"No, no! We're not the only ones in trouble; they've jumped the rest of the good mines and put this McNamara in as receiver on all of them, but that's small comfort. The Swedes are crazy. They've hired all the lawyers in town and are murdering more good American language than would fill Boeing strait. Dex is in favor of getting our friends together and throwing the receiver off. He wants to kill somebody, but we can't do that. They've got the soldiers to fall back on. We've been warned that the troops are instructed to enforce the court's action. I don't know what the plot is, for I can't believe the old judge is crooked—the girl wouldn't let him."

"Girl?"

Cherry Malotte leaned forward where the light shone on the young man's worried face.

"The girl? What girl? Who is she?"

Her voice had lost its lazy caress, her lips had thinned. Never was a woman's face more eloquent, mused Glenister as he noted her. Every thought fled to this window to peer forth, fearful, hateful, as the case might be. He had loved to play with her in the former days, to work upon her passions and watch the changes, to note her features mirror every varying emotion from tenderness to flippancy, from anger to delight, and at his bidding to see the pale cheeks glow with love's fire, the eyes grow heavy, the dainty lips invite kisses. Cherry was a perfect little spoiled animal, he reflected, and a very dangerous one.

"What girl?" she questioned again, and he knew beforehand the look that went with it.

"The girl I intend to marry," he said slowly, looking her between the eyes.

He knew he was cruel—he wanted to be. It satisfied the clamor and turmoil within him, while he also felt that the sooner she knew and the colder it left her the better. He could not note the effect of the remark on her, however, for as he spoke the door of the box opened, and the head of the Bronco Kid appeared, then retired instantly with apologies.

"Wrong stall," he said in his slow voice. "Looking for another party." Nevertheless he once had covered every inch of them, noted the drawn curtains and the breathless pause of the stewards. While he ears had caught part of Glenister's speech.

"You won't marry her," said Cherry quietly. "I don't know who she is, but I won't let you marry her."

She rose and smoothed her skirts.

"It's time we people were going now." She said it with a sneer at herself. "Take me out through this crowd. I'm living quietly, and I don't want these beasts to follow me."

As they emerged from the theater the morning air was cool and quiet, while the sun was just rising. The Bronco Kid lighted a cigar as they passed, nodding silently at their greeting. His eyes followed them, while his hands were so still that the match burned through to his fingers; then when they had gone on he reached out around savagely through the tobacco so that the cigar fell, while he muttered:

"So that's the girl you intend to marry? Well see, by God!"

CHAPTER VIII.

THE water front had a strong attraction for Helen Chester and rarely did a fair day pass without finding her in some quiet spot from which she could watch the shifting life along its edge, the ships at anchor and the varied incidents of the surf.

This morning she sat in a dory pulled high up on the beach, bathed in the bright sunshine and staring at the rollers, while lines of concentration wrinkled her brow. The wind had blown for some days till the ocean bent heavily across the shallow bar, and now, as it became quieter, loungiore-men were launching their craft, preparing to resume their traffic.

Not until the previous day had the news of her friends' misfortune come to her, and although she had heard no hint of fraud, she began to realize that they were involved in a serious tangle. To the question which she anxiously put to her uncle he had replied that their difficulty arose from a technicality in the mining laws which enabled a man had been shrewd enough to profit by. It was a complicated question, he said, and one requiring time to thresh out to an equitable settlement. She had undertaken to remind him of the service these men had done her, but with a smile, he interrupted. He could not allow such things to influence his judicial attitude, and she must not endevor to prejudice him in the discharge of his duty. Recognizing the justice of this, she had desisted.

For many days the girl had caught scattered talk between the judge and McNamara and had striven to learn his associates, but it all seemed foreign and dry, and beyond the fact that it bore on the litigation over the Midas creek mines, she understood nothing and cared less, particularly as a new interest had but recently come into her life, an interest in the form of a man —McNamara.

Jeff had begun with quiet, half concealed admiration of her, which had rapidly increased until his attentions had become of a singularly positive and relentless character.

Judge Stillman was openly delighted, while the court of one like Alec McNamara could but flatter any girl. In his presence Helen felt herself rebelling at his suit, yet as distance separated them she thought ever more kindly of it. This state of mind contrasted oddly with her feelings toward the other man she had met, for in this country there were but two. When Glenister was with her she saw his love lying nakedly in his eyes, and it exercised some spell which drew her to him in spite of herself, but when he had gone back came the distrust, the terror of the brute she felt was there behind it all. The one appealed to her while present, the other pleaded strongest while away. Now she was attempting to analyze her feelings and face the future squarely, for she realized that her affairs neared a crisis, and this, too, not a month after meeting the men. She wondered if she would come to love her uncle's friend. She did not know. Of the other she was sure—she never could.

Busied with these reflections, she noticed the familiar figure of Dextry wandering aimlessly. He was not unkempt, and yet his air gave her the impression of prolonged sleeplessness. Spying her, he approached and seated himself in the sand against the boat, while at her greeting he broke into talk as if he was needful only of her friendly presence to stir his confidential chords into active vibration.

"We're in terrible shape, miss."

"We're in terrible shape, miss," he said. "Our claim's jumped. Somebody runs in and talked the boy out of it while I was gone, and now we can't get 'em off. He's been tryin' this here law game that you all brought in this summer. I've been drunk. That's what makes me look so ornery."

He said the last not in the spirit of apology, for ready does your frontiersman consider that his self indulgences require publicity, but rather after the manner of one perverting news of solid interest, as he would inform you that his syndicate had broken or that he had purchased a horse.

"What made them jump your claims?"

"I don't know. I don't know nothin' about it, because, as I remarked previous, I ain't follered the lotterin' footsteps of the law none too close. Nor do I intend to. I simply drawn out of the game for a spell and lets the youngster have his fling. Then if he can't make good I'll take the cards and finish it for him.

"It's like the time I was ranchin' with an Englishman up in Montana. This here party claimed the misfortune of bein' a younger son, whatever that is, and is graduated to a ranch by his people back home. He acquired an intimate knowledge of the beast by reading the text books and by assimilated the secrets of ranchin' by correspondence school, he is fitted amongst to earn his natives dollar or two, and he does it. I am worthin' as an outfit as foreman, and it don't take long to know now that he's a good hearted fellow in spite of his rollin' blowers an' penuchle eyeglass. He ain't never had no actual experience, but he's got a Henry Thompson book that tells him all about everything from field mice to gorillas.

"We're troubled a heap with coyotes them days, and finally this party sends home for some Brobdian wolfhounds. I'm for placin' a sheep carcass, but he says—

"'No, no, me deah man; that's not sportsmanlike. We'll hunt 'em—aye, hunt 'em. Only fawncy the sport we'll have ridin' to hounds.'

"'Ridin' to hell,' says I. 'I ain't goin' to do no Simon Legree stunts. It ain't man's size.' Well, English, you don't understand, but I'm grieved at you.'

"Nothin' would do him but those 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' dogs, however, and he sent ten imported direct from Berkshire or Silcoxy or thereabouts, four of 'em great big blue ones. They was as handsome and lopsided a set of solid gold frost as ever you clapt your eye on. For the week rolled a rule hard downhill from the kitchen, and when them bloodied critters saw it comin' they tossed down their table and tore out like rabbits. After that I couldn't see no good in 'em with a spyglass.

"'They ain't got no grit,' says I. 'What makes you think they can fight?' I asked one day.

"'Wight' says H'Anglish. 'My dear man, they're full blooded. Cost neventy pun each. They're dreadful creatures when they're roused. They'll tear a wolf to pieces like a rug, kill bears, anything. Oh, rully, perfectly dreadful!'

"Well, it wasn't a week later that he went over to the east line with me to mend a fence. I had my rifle, axe and a hatchet and some staples. About a mile from the house we jumped up a little whitetail deer and scampered off when he seen us, but, bein' again a bluff where he couldn't get away, he climbed a cottonwood. H'Anglish was simply frothin' with excitement.

"'What a misfortune! Neyther gun nor hounds!'

"'I'll scratch his back and talk pretty to him,' says I, 'while you run back to the house, whichever and them ferocious bulldogs.'

"'Wolf hounds,' says he, with dignity. 'Wolf hounds, if you please.' They'll rend the poor beast limb from limb. I hate to do it, but it'll be good practice for the dogs.'

"'They may, be good renders,' says I, 'but don't fortify the gun.'

"Well, I throwed sticks at the critter when he tried to unclimb the tree till finally the boss got back with his dogs. They set up an awful holler when they see the bear—first one they'd ever smelled, I reckon—and the little feller crawled up in some forks and watched things, cautious, while they leaped about, bayin' most fierce and blood curdlin'.

"'How you goin' to get him down?' says I.

"'I shoot him in the lower jaw,' says the Britisher, 'so he can't bite the dogs. It'll give 'em cawnfidence.'

"'He takes aim at Mr. Bear's chin and misses it three times runnin', he's that excited.

"'Settle down, H'Anglish,' says I. 'He ain't got no double chins. How many shells left in your gun?'

"'Why, I've only one more, for I've only one more, for he hadn't stopped to fill the magazine, so I cautious him.

"'You're shootin' too low. Raise her.'

Millinery.

Our Formal Opening Display was very satisfactory. Before this is printed the empty hat stands will be replaced with hats now being trimmed.

We would suggest to our friends who could not be served Opening day to come in any day during the week. Earlier in day the better. There is such a radical change in styles that we urge our customers to see what we are showing, and become familiar with the new styles.

Corsets.

Our Corset Department is a very busy corner. Why? Because the decided change to the one piece gowns, calls for a long hip corset, which gives the appearance of long unbroken lines otherwise the hipless effect.

We have a complete assortment of styles, the corset you should wear is to be found here, and our corset sales-ladies shall be pleased to show and tell you what style suits your figure.

Old Bleached Towels and Towellings.

Every piece of "Old Bleach" Towelling is stamped "Old Bleach". They make nothing but linen in their mills. So that the stamp is a guarantee and assurance to you of its purity. During this week we received our fall importation of Old Bleach linens. Fine bleached Huck, plain and fancy for doing hand work on Towels for gifts, 5c. to 75c. yard.

Hemstitched Towels, 25c. to 85c. each.

SPECIAL.—5 dozen Old Bleach Towels, hemstitched, good value, 25 cents each.

New Madras Muslins

We received last week our new Madras Muslins for curtains. Great Fancy for bedrooms, 25c and 30c. yard. Oriental and floral effects for dining and music rooms, library and den, 35c. to 75c.

There is decidedly a growing use for Madras. Those interested in using Madras we find keep adding to as they make changes.

A Good Range and a Pleasant Cook.

A Peninsular Range

FILLS THE BILL.

Here is what one of our customers says who is using a "Peerless Peninsular."

Dear Sir,—After using the Peerless Peninsular range for some time past I have no hesitation in recommending it to any one who is desirous of getting, (what I believe), the best range for sale today.

In its Baking, Heating and fuel saving qualities it is a "Peerless" indeed; it can be controlled to any point. Its drafts and dampers are perfect, and for a baker it can't be beat. Therefore, I unhesitatingly recommend it and trust that this range will meet with the public appreciation it deserves.

Yours respectfully,

TWELVE YEARS IN THE "PEN."

Stanley Peterson, of the Township of Kaladar, was committed by J. M. Dafoe, J.P., on a charge of arson by setting fire to the barn of Philip Peterson at the Township of Kaladar on the 11th day of September, 1908. He was also committed for trial for having ordered and having illicit connection with one Alma Wood, a girl of about the age of 14 years and under the age of 16 years. He was brought before His Honor Judge Madden on Monday of last week and elected to be tried by the Judge without the intervention of a jury. His trial came off yesterday and Judge Madden sentenced him to ten years for arson and two years for seduction. H. M. Deroche, K. C., County Crown Attorney, for the Crown.

Chas. Gonnyea, of the Township of Kaladar, was committed for trial by J. M. Dafoe, J.P., for having on the 1st day of September, 1908, at the Township of Kaladar, committed the crime of arson by setting fire to a barn and shed of Wm. H. Vance. SONG SERVICE AT MORVEN.

The Song Service in the Brick Church, Morven, last Sunday evening, was well worth any trouble any one may have taken to attend it. There was a very large congregation present, the body of the church being filled, and a number seated in the gallery, and all went home seemingly delighted, and satisfied with the evening's programme. The choir very ably sang three selections, in one anthem Mr. G. Fralick singing a solo, and Miss Lake and Mrs. G. Fralick a duet. A mixed trio by Miss Horton, Mrs. and Mr. G. Fralick, a ladies' trio by Miss Horton, Miss Perry and Mrs. Fralick, a ladies' quartette by Miss Horton, Mrs. Horton, Mrs. Fralick and Miss Funnell, and the chanting of the Lord's Prayer by the choir, were all most excellently rendered; while Miss Horton, in her pleasing and capable way, sang a beautiful solo. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Horton, occupied the pulpit, giving a short instructive sermon. There are some splendid voices in that choir, and rumor says they are going to make a specialty of their ladies' quartette.

The production of intoxicating beverages in the United States fell off nearly a million dollars a day during July and August.

"Hecla" Furnace

Means Perfect Heating without Gas, Dust or Smoke.

The "Hecla" Furnace is the only Furnace with Fused Joints.

These Joints are made by fusing the steel and cast iron parts together at white heat making an indestructible joint. Fused Joints are permanently airtight. Even after 20 years' use they will not work loose or leak. They insure absolute freedom from dust, smoke and gas.

The Steel-Ribbed Fire Pot used on the "Hecla" Furnace has three times as much radiating surface as any other style of fire pot. It will save fuel for you and give you more heat. It extracts from the fire, heat that would otherwise go up the chimney.

Let us show you the 1908 "Hecla" and explain all the latest improvements in detail.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

USE AND RECOMMEND

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

MISS MILDRED HOLLAND,

the Celebrated and Incomparable Theatrical Star, writes as follows:

I am delighted with Newbro's Herpicide. It is just what I have been looking for. I find that it not only prevents dandruff, but that it stops the hair from falling out. It is a most delightful hair dressing, and my lady's toilet table is complete with out it.

Sincerely MILDRED HOLLAND.

A woman to be pretty must have pretty hair. To possess the charm about beautiful hair that lends to it a sensual adornment that all of the skill of all of her beauty doctors combined. The hair need not be of extraordinary or abnormal length, but it must have that appearance of appearance that comes from intelligent care, and is the result of perfect hair health.

The most cultured ladies in every community use Newbro's Herpicide and when you see a head of hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life, it is a fairly good indication that Newbro's Herpicide has been used.

A common cause of dullness of the hair is the presence of the dust and soot in the streets that is kept in constant motion by trolley cars, automobiles, etc. This fine dust—frequently laden with disease germs—adheres to the hair and dulls its natural luster.

A delightful way to cleanse and beautify the hair is to moisten a cloth with Newbro's Herpicide and draw it carefully through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. It may be done daily, if desired, or less often, as preferred.

The result of this cleansing process will prove a surprise, not only in the amount of dirt removed, but in the added beauty of the hair and the sense of cleanliness and comfort that follows. Shampooing will also remove this dust, but too frequent washing of the hair is harmful.

Newbro's Herpicide is the Original remedy that "kills the dandruff germ." It eradicates dandruff and stops falling hair. It is the only real scalp disinfecter in existence. A delightful and refreshing hair dressing. Stops Itching of the scalp almost instantly.

Modern Merchandising!

The day has come in which a successful business can be built up on fake values. People of to-day want to buy their Clothing of a Clothing Store, but they want to get a reliable store for their clothing or notion if they want to get anything. Years ago there were robbers who tried to make customers. In fact that is how it came to be said, "Buyer and let buy, with every purchase you make there are hundreds of others in Canada where you couldn't get as large bottom in if you should spend $100.00. People have found out that in their own interests. The old way was to sell a dozen articles in christmas and workbaskets that cost fifty cents, and send out a circular saying sale to sell at the wonderful price. Today the modern merchandising will tell you that for $10.00 you can get good goods, tell the truth about them, and stand behind them. We are not in the business for fake, we have entered that it pays to sell our customers honest goods at honest prices, and we will save you money enough to pay for your coal.

On Friday, last, a gloom was cast over this vicinity when the news spread of the death of Mrs. Jane McGill, an aged resident of this place. Deceased came to these parts when 20 years old, and has lived in the vicinity ever that time. She is survived by two sons and two daughters. Wm. and James and Susanah at home, and Mrs. Hicks, Mohap, Moscow. The remains were placed in the vault at Newburgh, to await interment later in the year in Napanee and their last resting place alongside her ...

DEATH OF MRS. ISAIAH HUFFMAN.

On Thursday, Sept. 27th, 1906, Susannah Huffman, widow of the late Isaiah Huffman, passed away. The funeral took place from her late residence on Sunday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, to the Western cemetery.

Mrs. Huffman, nee Susannah Schanerhorn, was born in Richmond, Mount Pleasant, about four miles from Napanee, on February 24th, 1820. Her parents were Amos Schanerhorn and Sarah Nagel, both of them children of United Empire Loyalists. She was united in marriage before she was 19, on January 3d, 1839, to the late Isaiah Huffman, and came to live on the farm where she has ever since resided, nearly 70 years. She became associated with the M. E. church at the early age of 17 years, and was a faithful and consistent member of the Methodist church until her death. She was a most loyal and unselfish wife and mother, a charitable neighbor, and a faithful friend. She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Henry B. Allison, who is now in her 87th year, and one daughter, Mrs. M. C. Bogart, while one son and two daughters predeceased her many years ago.

INSTANTLY KILLED.

A terrible accident occurred at Collins Bay, on Wednesday afternoon which by the premature explosion of a charge of dynamite, Henry Thomas Smith, who lived near Collins Bay, was instantly killed, and his brother, Alfred, seriously injured. The accident occurred in a field back of Thomas Smith's house, where they were going to blast a huge granite boulder. Just how the accident occurred cannot yet be ascertained, but it is thought that in putting in the charge it must have been jarred against the rock, causing it to explode.

PERRY—MOYER

One of the prettiest weddings of the season took place on Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 24th, at 4 o'clock, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Perry, 46 Stanley street, London, Ont., when their daughter, Miss Christine Stevenson Perry was married to Mr. H. B. Moyer, the well-known sporting editor and cartoonist of The Advertiser.

Rev. J. G. Stuart, of Knox Church, performed the ceremony, in the presence of a number of friends and relatives.

The bride, who was handsomely attired, was assisted by her sister, Miss Caroline Perry, while Mr. Adolph Shoolbraun supported the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Moyer left on the evening train for Montreal, Ottawa, Quebec and on their return will reside at 4 Perry street.

Miss Perry was a niece of Mrs. Jas. Miller, Morven.

WEDDINGS

At Christ Church, Tamworth, on Wednesday, Sept. 19th, at 2 o'clock, John M. Bradshaw was married to Mrs. Charlotte Yorke by the Rev. J. W. Jones. The happy couple were attended by the groom's brother and Miss McIlwine. The bride wore a ...ish blue travelling dress with hat to match and looked very pretty. The best for many years. The happy pair will take up farming near Selby.

The same evening, at 8 o'clock, in St. James' Church, Tweed, the Rev. J. W. Jones married Harper Reid to Miss Myrtle Hall. On account of recent bereavements in the family the marriage was a very quiet affair. The happy couple left on the midnight for Toronto, and on their return will reside on the groom's farm, near Centreville. Every one of Harper's friends and neighbors wishes him every happiness with his charmingly pretty young bride.

THE GAY MUSICIAN

Julian Edwards' new comic opera, The Gay Musician, with book and lyrics by Stodle and Campbell, which ran for one hundred nights during this summer at Wallack's Theatre in New York City, comes to the Grand Opera House on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Oct. 8th. It has been many years since New York was so interested in a new comic opera as it was in The Gay Musician. With the record of Dolly Varden, The Jolly Musketeer, When Johnny Comes Marching Home to his name in recent years, Julian Edwards has outdone himself in the music of his latest creation. Critics are unanimous in declaring that in The Gay Musician Edwards has done the best work of his life. In fact, the one topic of comment in New York during the run of The Gay Musician was that it was far superior to the Viennese operas that were the vogue in New York, and the same has been said in Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Montreal, Toronto, and other cities this season. The cast of artists for The Gay Musician is a notable one and includes such well-known players as Amelia Stone, Joseph C. Miron, and 75 others.

Millinery Openings.

DONSEE & CO.

Autumn days are here awakening a flutter of anticipation amongst the fair sex, as to what will reign supreme in the realm of wearing apparel. Of course the hat beautiful is the subject paramount with Milady, and to-day she was revelling in the loveliness of the new styles on exhibition.

The large hat is a general subject of discussion, and if we followed Paris, we could scarcely get them too large, but our ladies usually prefer a moderation of the extreme styles. Consequently, the hats are not nearly so extreme as those seen in Paris and New York. Then there are many very pretty hats in smaller shapes. The large hats are mostly of the mushroom or drooping styles with medium crowns. While the hats with narrow brims have mostly higher crowns, there will be no doubt be a demand for many large hats, but medium and smaller will doubtless be more in favor. We are informed that it will be a great season for ostrich feathers, both in the long plumes as well as the short tips. Wings are one of the leading features of the season. The large directoire buckles are a noticeable feature and certainly are very effective.

Satins in black, white, and all the leading colors are quite the latest fashion for hats. We saw some stunning hats covered with satin and very tastefully trimmed. They are sure to be very popular, and already a great many of these have been sold. The leading shades are taupe, emerald, russe green, saxtans and grey. There is quite a touch of gold in various trimmings, and gold tassels for both hat garniture and dress trimmings are fashionable.

IF FURRED AND COATED, IT'S A LOOKING GLASS STOMACH WARNING.

When it is the morning after the night before you do not have to look at your tongue to know that the stomach is sick—for the head is aching, no appetite, nobody and the sensation of the mouth is clouded.

The real time to watch the tongue is all of the time. If it is coated with a white fur or possibly with dark triangular spots though it is red, it will tell you in the same parts of indigestion that is needs help, yet the coating is not a disease but a symptom. It is a sign that you are getting into a bad way and that there is need of Mother Seigel's Syrup to purify, to regulate, to tone the stomach that T. H. Wallace, the local druggist, is a guarantor of satisfaction with every 50 cent bot or money back.

TOWN COUNCIL

Council Chambers,
Napanee, Oct. 5th, 1908.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening. Mayor Metz presided.

Members present—Counsellors Arkwright, Simpson, Kimmerly, Dunnise and Bronson.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed.

Mrs. A. McNeil was present and asked whether she was liable for half of the cost of the grade-crossing between the Campbell House and Mr. F. W. Armstrong's, or for half the whole bill.

On motion the matter was referred to the Streets Committee to investigate and report at the next regular meeting of the Council.

Mr. Nathan Kyle was present and referred to the fence on Mr. Bryans also to the condition of the fence on the side of the Opera House as a place of entertainment. It is proposed to remodel the latter and make it an up-to-date fire hall. The walls on the Bryan House will require to be taken down and moved on a new foundation and other improvements on the way of better exterior accommodation. Mr. Nathan asked on behalf of Mr. Bryan that certain changes be made on the west fence so as to be removed and that the light remain as it is, and that a building permit be granted therefor.

On motion Council decided to grant the permit subject to the following conditions: That the building be erected on the line of the Opera House and that the Brandon House not encroach on the sidewalk in any manner, and that the building be not built against the wall of the Opera House.

Mr. Bryan was given permission to move the fence as requested.

BURNS—MABONEY

A very pretty wedding took place at the R. C. church, Erinsville, on Wednesday, Sept. 30th, when Miss Maloney, daughter of Mrs. T. Maloney, was united in marriage by the Rev. Father Cates, to Mr. Andrew F. Burns, of Napanee, the ceremony being at 10 o'clock. The sweet little bride looked most charming in a gown of white tamoine silk and a very becoming hat to match and carried in her hand a white kid covered prayer book. Her going away suit was of navy blue cloth. The bride's maid looked real pretty in a white voile suit with hat to match. The groom's man to the bride was a handsome young gentleman. The bridesmaid a pretty pearl brooch, and to the groomsman a fine of gold cuff links. After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the bride's mother, where relatives and friends awaited them, and all were invited to a beautiful dinner, the remainder of the day and evening was spent in dancing, and all other amusements. The presents were numerous and costly. The bride will be greatly missed, as she was one of our most popular young ladies.

Fire at Newburgh.

Special to The Beaver.

Newburgh, Oct. 3d.—It was a rude awakening that greeted Ballard Brothers this morning. The dreaded cry of fire was the signal, and scores of citizens were soon rushing to Main street, and rush to the heart of the place, where flames were seen issuing from the upper windows of the large block that not had first been seen by Vincent Mc-Neil and Bernard Kennedy, on their return from a dance at Odessa, and these two gave the alarm. The rest of the story is a chapter of loss and excitement, gathering together the leave-t block that the flames did not destroy in Newburgh since the memorable conflagration of September 7th, 1891, which wiped out half the village and caused for the time many of its citizens.

The fire of this morning made very rapid work of the building, which is known as the Perry block, but now owned by George M. Walker, the upper floor being used as a [illegible] hall, and the lower floor as a [illegible] and [illegible] store. Mr. Walker was [illegible] when the flames were discovered, and [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] minutes, it was a seething furnace. Not a breath of wind was stirring, and it was thought quite possible that the Walker's and protected by a brick firewall and with galvanized roof, escaped by M. Ryan & Son, as a grocery and hardware store, and used as a large public hall above. [illegible] on this high roof and using to best advantage the buckets of water used daily by the brigade that had been formed in some way however the fire was kept [illegible] under the roof and attacked the inside wall of the hall above. With smoke belching out from the further end of the hall, all efforts to save the building were seen to be futile, and attention was turned to the Ryan store, a part of which by [illegible] was saved. Smoke soon put an end to these efforts and this building was in turn resigned to the flames.

Next to this in the residence and [illegible] of Chas. Wellards, and a brave fight could have been made than the successful struggle to save this home. Only twelve feet separated between it and Ryan's. The windows and roofing were protected by extended pieces of tin and hundreds of pails of water used. Men with [illegible] clothes and wellsoaked, worked [illegible] watched every attack made by the fire while others remained to guard the home. There was great rejoicing at the escape of [illegible] as Mr. Wellards carried no insurance.

In the meantime the Napanee fire-brigade had been telephoned for and after considerable delay, caused by [illegible] the necessity of sending to Deseronto for a special train, the engine and a full [illegible] was late to render any assistance. Further danger was then thought to be past and the brigade returned to their home. SOMETHING CAN BE DONE.

TO STOP THE WEARISOME CATARRH IS NAPANEE.

Catarrhal troubles are depressing, but there is something you can do with certainty. Catarrh is a germ disease and it is useless to attempt to cure it with internal remedies. It must be reached through the nasal passages, where the germs multiply. Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder is the most successful remedy for Catarrh, Hay Fever, Headache, Deafness, Sore Throat, Tonsilitis, Bronchitis, Influenza, Whooping Cough, Croup, Asthma, Colds, Coughs, Grippe, Bad Breath, Sore Eyes, Weak Lungs, Consumption, Bleeding of the Lungs, Pneumonia, Pleurisy, Pain in the Chest, Pain in the Back, Kidney Trouble, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Nervous Headache, Nervous Prostration, Nervous Debility, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Neuralgia, Backache, Pain in the Limbs, Pain in the Joints, Pain in the Muscles, Pain in the Nerves, Pain in the Head, Pain in the Face, Pain in the Eyes, Pain in the Ears, Pain in the Stomach, Pain in the Bowels, Pain in the Kidneys, Pain in the Liver, Pain in the Heart, Pain in the Side, Pain in the Chest, Pain in the Back

My Hair Ran Away

Don't have a falling out with your hair. It might leave you! Then what? That would mean thin, scraggly, uneven, rough hair. Keep your hair at home! Fasten it tightly to your scalp! You can easily do it with Ayer's Hair Vigor. It is something more than a simple hair dressing. It is a hair medicine, a hair tonic; a hair food.

The best kind of a testimonial—"I'll let your hair alone."

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The annual District Convention of Napanee District was held at Napanee on Tuesday. The morning session and executive meeting were largely attended by members from all parts of the district. The meeting was opened by singing hymn 313, Methodist Hymn Book. Mrs. Gilbert Ashley, Napanee, conducted the devotional exercises. Mrs. Ashley is a most successful leader and her address was full of helpful suggestions. Mrs. Gilbert, Napanee, was then called to the chair during the day. After Devotional Exercises the secretary, Mrs. M. B. Edwards, Mrs. Geo. Sanford was called upon to act as Secretary, and Mrs. Wm. Vanluvan as press reporter.

The reports from Auxiliaries and Circles, which were represented were most gratifying. Three new Circles were reported. The Treasurer's report was to the Convention a number of stirring, bright living testimonies which did not fail in carrying with them an influence for good. Three papers prepared for the occasion were read during the two sessions.

The first, a most excellent paper, written by Mrs. T. J. Symmons, Selby, and read by Mrs. Gilbard, Napanee, on the subject, "What Constitutes a Good Auxiliary" was followed by a discussion which brought out the following points—our aim, membership, money, education, better Christian lives.

The second paper, read by Mrs. M. Parks, Hawley, on "Relation of Tithing to Missionary Work", was also followed by an enthusiastic discussion, which emphasized the need of education along these lines.

The third paper, "Enthusiasm the Secret of Success", was received with hearty applause. No discussion followed.

The Watch Tower Heralds in Costume, members of the Western Methodist church Mission Circle, presented "Our Work" most admirably. Of course, when not speaking, Japan and China sat on the floor. British Columbia was attired in the inevitable fur shawl and feathered head dress, our Galician girl was wattled dressed as befitted a resident of our N. W. Territory, while our demure little Quebec girl looked quite like the girls we are used to meeting every day. But the grave clear tones and fervent words in which they told the audience of what "The Light Came to Our People from Your People," will not soon be forgotten by those who heard them. Miss Birdie Sandford, of Napanee, favored the convention with a solo.

Mrs. (Rev.) Hoyce officiated as organist during the day. A vote by ballot asked for Mrs. Gibson for District Organist for another year. Mrs. Lloyd was appointed Assistant.

A short conference on District Conventions brought resolutions to the effect that we continue to hold our annual Convention the first week in October. That we continue to use printed programmes, and that we accept an invitation from Selby to hold the Convention there next year. Prayer in behalf of a sister who is ill, a hearty vote of thanks to entertaining Methodist hymn. "God be with you till we meet again," and prayer by our beloved President, Mrs. Gilbert, to close a most helpful and successful convention.

NEWBURGH.

Jennie Brandon, Treasurer, Percy Shewell, Committee, Form III, A. Lizzie Winter and Percy Neshet; Form III, B., Gertrude Wesse and James Lapum; Form II., Louise Beeman and Clark Osborne; Form I., Fanny Milligan and Clifford Skinner. The first meeting of the term will be held on the afternoon of October 23rd.

The Presbyterian congregation worshipped with the Methodists on Sunday night last, owing to the damage to their church by fire. It will take some weeks to repair this church, as ceiling and walls are badly damaged and in the meantime the congregation will be invited to use their sister church. An opportunity thus presents itself to practically illustrate the spirit of union now working in these two religious bodies.

An account of Saturday's fire appears in another column.

Special Missionary and Harvest Thanksgiving services will be held in St. John's Anglican church next Sunday at 3 p.m. The Rev. Canon Starr, Kingston, will be the preacher.

Mrs. W. Dempsey Dwyer will be at home to callers on Thursday afternoon and Friday afternoon and evening, Oct. 22nd and 23rd, and after that on the 1st and 3rd Friday of each month.

Many complaints of Eyestrain—Pain over forehead, dizziness, or lack of head fullness in the forehead, sore or inflamed eyelids, etc., are often mistaken for neuralgia, and may be present when the vision is apparently perfect. Defects of this nature can be relieved by the proper glasses. Headache, nervousness, irritability, many forms of stomach trouble, and other complaints of similar nature, often disappear entirely when the eyes are properly fitted.

Mr. Ray also makes a specialty of manufacturing "Crystal" in children to special order, without the necessity of an operation, except in extreme cases. Referring to G. S. Hudson, Tottenham; Dr. W. J. Gibson, Belleville.

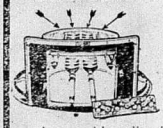
Let us show you how easy it is to shake the

"Hecla" Furnace



The "Hecla" has four grate bars. Each one can be shaken separately. This means that you can shake down just the part of the fire where the ashes are, without disturbing the rest of the coals.

With "Hecla" Triangular Grate Bars, you can get rid of all the ashes—save coal—keep the fire bright and clean—and do away with sifting ashes, because no fresh coal or half-burnt clinkers come down in the ashpan.

We would be pleased to talk over the furnace question with you and show you, part by part, just why the "Hecla" Furnace is the best for you to buy. Come in any time.

COUNTY COURT.

At the non-jury sittings of the County Court the only case tried on Thursday was one between H. Selden Denison, Plaintiff, and J. F. Letherland, of Kingston, Defendant. This was an action brought by the plaintiff against the defendant to recover the balance claimed to be due him for lumber sold, interest and costs. The defendant admitted that the amount claimed was due, but claimed that he was entitled to a certain portion of the timber and claimed offset proportionate to the amount.

The case was tried by His Honor Judge Price, who after hearing the evidence gave judgment for the plaintiff for $31.41, the amount claimed, and costs of the action, and dismissed the counter claim and costs. G. F. Ruttan, K.C., appeared for the plaintiff and W. F. Nickle, K.C., Kingston, for the defendant.

CLEVER BLIND ARTISTS

Those who attended the musical recital in the Western Methodist church on Oct. 1st were one and all delighted with the programme which consisted of select recitations and piano numbers. The attendance was good, notwithstanding counter attractions. Mr. W. T. Gibbard rendered the performers. The work of Mr. Herbert Trower on the piano was of a exceptional character. Mr. Trower has an artistic touch and the fact that he is totally blind makes his performance all the more wonderful. Mr. Roy Wilson of Brockville, the elocutionist, gave a number of pleasing selections, and also a humorous reading for an encore number. Mr. Joseph Broadduff, accompanist, who is a baritone singer of renown in that city, and his rendering of The Vagabond, Father O'Flinn, and other numbers delighted his audience. Their entertainment is commended not only because they are blind, but for the use of their ability and their different branches of entertaining. The Epworth League, under whose auspices they appeared has secured the promise from them to return at the near future on that those who missed hearing them will have that opportunity.

TUCKER—IRVING.

On Wednesday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, a very fashionable wedding took place in the dear old city "Sidney Church" of Christ, Tamworth. Miss Ella Irving was the sweet and charming bride of the young bride who was led to the altar by her father to become the wife of Mr. Chas. Bowie Tucker, of Bermuda, who is the son of the late Archdeacon Tucker, D.C.L., Bermuda. Miss Minnie Shields presided at the organ, and the happy couple were also assisted by Miss Fannie Cottall, acting as bridesmaid, while S. E. Kennedy splendidly carried out his duties as groomsman. The Rev. J. W. Jones officiated. Prettier than a picture looked the bride dressed in white liberty silk with a pale blue lace trimmed with blue roses and duchess ribbon. In her hand she carried a large bouquet of white and pink roses. The bridesmaid was dressed in a blue skirt and lovely white blouse, and carried a bouquet of white and pink roses. A very large gathering of friends witnessed the ceremony after which the bridal party repaired to the bride's home where a dainty wedding breakfast awaited them. The usual toasts were heartily honored and the happy couple left on the evening train for New York. The bride's going away gown was olive blue broadcloth. After an extended trip east, they will return for a while to reside at Tamworth. The presents were numerous and costly, and the hearty good wishes of all attended Mr. and Mrs. Tucker on their journey through life together.

NEWBURGH.

Local weather favored the High School Athletic Association on the occasion of their annual sports on Friday afternoon last. The attendance was large, and keen competition to the school. There were many events on the High school programme and Principal Sutton, of the Public School, also put on eight contests for his pupils. Every event was interesting, and in many cases the competition was very keen. The H. S. senior championship was again won by Arthur Roberts, by a later margin, the other senior the results were very close. Bernard Davey winning the intermediate honors by one point over Archie Gallagher and Roy Shorts the Junior honors by one point over Leo Kennedy. The girls' races were not by any means uninteresting. The egg race and the nail race furnished much amusement and incidentally demonstrated the fact that some of the girls were expert knitter at hatchless. The public school events were enthusiastically contested, and each race had a big field. Messrs C. H. Emile, W. H. Dunn and D. A. Nesbitt acted as judges, and Mr. Fred Shorts made a most efficient starter. A special long distance road race of three miles to Tamboreville and return was run on Monday night, and tested the mettle of the boys. There were four entries, and in a close finish Fred Beatie won out from Archie Babcock second.

The opening services on Sunday last in connection with the Methodist Church were an unqualified success. The morning congregation filled the church to its utmost capacity, and the music rendered was of the highest order. The choir was augmented for the occasion by Miss Pearl A. Wood and the Misses Ida and Lena Humphries, of Madoc, and Nesbit acted as organist. The sermon by Rev. Mr. Wilson was a masterly effort, and was listened to by a most attentive audience.

An unexpected but very welcome visitor was Rev. Mr. Lake, of Lake of Bellcote. Mr. Lake had been appointed by request of the pastor of the two, but learning that impossible to be with them, and as the date of his appointment of his early date, and also on account emphatic request of the work of the Sunday School. Mr. Lake left Woodstock on Monday night to take the first train to Prince Edward County. Shortly after he went to Tetaule, and there he gathered the Sunday School together with Methodists of the church in Tetaule, which under him grew in Toronto to such proportions as to necessitate its division. He is still deeply interested in the work, and his presence in Tetaule on Sunday last was a great encouragement to the faithful, who have struggled hard but pointed addresses were made in the afternoon and evening to the Sunday School, by Principal Mr. D. A. Nesbitt, Mr. Wm. Hawley, Mr. A. Wood, Mr. Lake, Mr. Rev. Mr. Stratford, and Mr. W. A. Pye, the Wesley.

The morning sermon Mr. Crossley text was Exodus 2-3. Take it child, and nurse it for me and I will give thee thy wages. The child in the work of God need begin early in life, and not before this he opens endless the grandest possibilities. Those in attendance to be developed that mental and moral strength which shall enable them to battle with the world. Excellent illustrations of childhood and youth, were and childhood was the period of the nailed Christ into an immortal and successful future. As Peter on the night before his death had to die upon the cross, so must children in death—the good and the bad—so there are two roads to reach the feet of our Lord. One is the child and the wrong the path and the other the children from the wrong road and turn their feet into the right. In the noble work committed to us Christian parents and all to the Church of Christ. Children to become disciples the proper time for following Jesus. The calling must be shaped and the exact course must be changed at the right moment. Just the rock and the mountain barbed at second and Lisbon the influence. Solomon early recognized the importance of the plastic years of youth, and it is a sad thing when parents imagine that sunday education or public school education is sufficient to train their children. Just the golden rule of righteousness. The whole duty of man is to walk uprightly, and this is not a day of but is to-morrow, and it is in the spiritual development in the world that children. Rev. Mr. Mathews then read Luther and Wesley.

The words of the text were spoken to a woman and it is to be observed that in the speeches of child-training Eve in the days of our Lord and Saviour, held a responsible position, and if properly advised and under our relation to God the next a sights influence for the uplifting of the world. Every mother can say "On God's altar I put myself to-day, and pray for my own sake, but for the sake of my children." Many children however, have not the advantage of religious training at home until a child is that it is that this should be out and the Sunday School has become in to do for the children what the parents fail in the duty of. And if ever there was a situation to which the parents of this land should be loyal it is in the Sunday School. Fifty years hence, the present leaders and men controlling the moral and country's life, in all departments will be gone on the stage of action. Today we are training in our homes and schools the candidates for these places of leadership. What not this work be well done? It is useless to be understood that it is the duty of this generation and the Christian Church of God to provide Christian men for these places of power. Let it be true to this mission, for it is the trust and glory whose mental moral and spiritual training are carefully looked after to-day those will wield the destinies of the future. There is to be the greatest righteousness, of the coming of the Kingdom of God amongst men, wherein truth and honesty and righteousness shall prevail on every hand. It were well we were to consider what part we have to take and what part the children have to take in promoting the coming of these latter days.

In the evening another large congregation was present, and Mr. Crossley preached a most forcible and deeply impressive sermon from Acts 13-36. He was a powerful and irresistible argument for a life of service as the only ideal worth following. He is the greatest man who serves his generation best. Here is found the very keynote of the life of the Christ. He lived to serve. Many a man slips into eternity ingloriously and is carried on to the eternal tide without ever accomplishing anything definite or worth while. But that is not the fate of a true man, who uses his talents, be they great or small, and individuality and stews the talents of humanity which it is given to him to direct.

Mr. Crossley came with a message clear and distinct and presented it with unusual vigor and force. It is the very note this Jubilee celebration should strike and which will make it incalculable in attaining the higher and sanctification of the church into a deeper sense of responsibility.

At the evening service Miss Ivy Barton sang two very pleasing solos.

The Jubilee services proper will be held on Sunday next when Rev. Dr. Benson, will preach morning and evening. The final supper on Monday night, to which ladies' tickets is made, the town will take place and will be the crowning event. Already about two hundred have been sold at outside points, and a great time is counted for which the most ample preparations will be made by the ladies of the congregation. The Bay of Quinte Railway has consented to offer single fare return tickets for this occasion.

A cement walk has been completed this week on main street from Mr. Wehanks' to the railway tracks. The walk fronts the grounds recently turned Rev. H. Ellis and Mr. Chant moved two cars into part of Mrs. McMullin's premises for the winter and Mr. Chant will add more before building. In the beginning his house destroyed in the recent fire and Public School together are attending the Teachers Convention in Napanee this week.

Mrs. Vanwood, of Porten, is visiting at Mr. W. Stocks.

Mr. Harry Mills, of Petrolia, spent Sunday at Mr. Geo. Bell's.

An event of a unusual on Sunday evening in which he was thrown vocalist from the Mr. and Mrs. Chant's singing a selected article.

Mr. Chant made a collection at the close of the address, which amounted to the handsome sum of $4.00, which was handed to Mr. Chant to be used in the purchase of a suitable present for the retiring pastor. The collection was taken up by Miss Ivy Barton and Miss Ida Humphries.

Mr. Madden and Nesbit spent a couple of days in Toronto last week.

Mr. Wm. Wagar has been engaged by Mr. Wm. Lake, of Tetaule, to work on his farm for the period of the winter months. Mr. Lake had been in poor health for some time past, and it is hoped that the change will be beneficial to him

"Some prospector getting in from a trip," he thought.

The stranger stopped, scratched a match, and as he undertook to light his pipe, the observer caught the momentary shine of a metallic face. The match spattered out and then came impatient blasphemy as he reached for another.

"Evenin', suh! You all oblige me with a match?" He addressed the watcher on the bank above and, without waiting for a reply, began to climb upward.

No slender man this, and as he drew the bunny of light to the best hardsome as he neared behind the bushes. Without removing the hat he wiped forward with the ferocity of an animal about to attack a fellow beast with which it is battling for food, and the African Ingenious pendel he was in charge for the court to see that neither party received injury. He spoke adroitly, and it satisfied her to have the proposition resolved into such simplicity.

She had come prepared to spend the night and witness the early morning execution, so the receiver made the best of his opportunity. He showed her over the premises, explaining the many things that were strange to her. Not only was there a fascination for her in every scrawny, fat chicken or fowl that she saw, but she had a deep affection for all domestic animals, and neither species of woman's weakness was absent from this observant girl. Even the complicated machinery of the pumping engine and its queer whistle gave her pleasure, and when luncheon was served on the kitchen table she was in a perfect state of enjoyment.

Dexter, who had been left to himself, was getting into trouble. He had found a number of bottles of liquor, and, having sampled them, was in a condition of maudlin affection for all the world. He was in the act of kissing the Chinese cook when the receiver entered, and the latter, with a yell of terror, fled to the kitchen, where he rapidly locked and barred the doors and windows. Dexter followed him to the door, and, finding it impregnable, pounded his head against it and howled.

Then he returned to the dining-room and, finding a bottle of whiskey, drank himself into insensibility.

Meanwhile the receiver, who had been showing Miss Chester the sights, was leading her toward the bluff overlooking the river. Here, in the shade of a tree, they sat down, and he began to tell her of the plans he had made for her father's future. He was very much in earnest, and she was deeply interested, for she had come to look upon him as a friend. Her own affairs were in such a tangle that she was glad to forget them for a time, and so she listened to his words with a feeling of relief.

Suddenly he stopped short and, with a quick movement, pushed her down into the grass. She was about to protest when she saw that his face was white and that he was looking toward the creek. Following his gaze, she saw a man on horseback riding toward them. He was a long way off, but she could see that he was leading another horse.

"Who is it?" she asked.

"I don't know, but I'm afraid it's Glenister," he answered. "He has escaped, and I won't scream. I promise." She looked up at him appealingly, at which he dipped his head, so that she caught only a glimpse of his face, and then hushed away.

"All right! Don't try it because I'll be hidden in those bushes yonder at the bend, and I'll keep you covered till the others are gone." He leaped down the bank, ran to the cavalcade, mounted quickly, and the three lashed their horses into a run, disappearing up the trail around the sharp curve. She heard the blows of their quirts as they whipped the pack horses.

They were long out of sight before the girl moved or made sound, although she knew that none of the three had passed at the bend. She only stood and gazed, for as they galloped off she had heard the scrap of a broken sentence. It was but one excited word sounding through the rattle of hoofs—her own name—"Helen!" and yet because of it she did not voice the alarm, but rather began to piece together bit by bit the strange points of this adventure. She recited the outlines of her captor with a wrinkle of perplexity. Her fright disappeared entirely, giving place to intense excitement. "No, no; it can't be! And yet I wonder if it is!" she cried. "Oh, I wonder if it could be!"

She opened her lips to cry aloud, then hesitated. She started toward the tents, then paused, and for many moments after the hoof beats had died out she stayed undecided. Surely she wished to give the signal to force the fierce pursuit. What meant this robbery, this defiance of the law, of her uncle's edicts and of McNamara? They were common thieves, criminals, outlaws, these men, deserving punishment, and yet she recalled a darker night, when she herself had sobbed and quivered with the terrors of pursuit and two men had shielded her with their bodies.

She turned and sped toward the tents, bursting in through the canvas door. Instantly every man rose to his feet at sight of her pallid face, her flashing eyes and rumpled hair.

"Sluice robbers!" she cried breathlessly. "Quick! A holdup! The watchman is hurt!"

A roar shook the night air, and the men poured out past her, while the day shift came tumbling forth from every quarter in various stages of undress.

"Where? Who did it? Where did they go?"

McNamara appeared among them, fierce and commanding, seeming to grasp the situation intuitively without explanation from her.

"Come on, men. We'll run 'em down. Get out the horses. Quick!"

He was mounted even as he spoke and other joined him. Then, turning to the watchman, he raised his long arm up the valley toward the mountains. "Trouble jumps!" he cried. "Ride!"

Ten of five and under the hills! Run down to discovery, one of you, and telephone to town for Voorhees and a posse!"

As they made ready to ride away the girl cried:

"Stop! Not that way. They went down the gulch—three negroes."

She pointed out of the valley toward the dim glow on the southern horizon, and the cavalcade rode away into the gloom.

CHAPTER X.

UP creek the three negroes fled, past other camps, to where the stream branched. Here they took to the right and urged their horses along a forsaken trail to the headwaters of the little tributary and over the low saddle. They had endeavored to reach undisputed paths as soon as possible in order that they might pass unnoticed. Before quitting the saddle they halted their heaving horses and, selecting a prominent rock, removed the grease paint from their features as best they could. Their rags were subdued by sounds of pursuit, but as the moments passed and none came the freedom eased some what, and they conversed guardedly. As the morning light spread they crossed the rough crest-line east of the range, but stopped again, and, somewhat subdued, hid them among the rocks. Slapjack left the others here and rode southward down the Dry Creek trail toward town, while the partners shifted part of the weight from the overloaded pack mules to the remaining saddle animals and continued on westward along the barren ranks of hills on foot, leading the five horses.

"It don't seem like we'll get away this easy," said Dexty, scanning the back trail. "If we do, I'll be tempted to foller the business myself. This

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL

HEALTH SAVING EXPLAINED BY A NAPANEE CITIZEN WHO KNOWS FROM EXPERIENCE.

Many Napanee people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know their organs need help.

Sick kidneys are responsible for a great amount of suffering, and ill health.

The reason so many use Doan's Kidney Pills is that quick relief follows kidney weakness. Here is what a Napanee citizen says:—

Mrs. Wm. Hall, of West st., Napanee, Ont., says:

"Many painful and annoying symptoms of kidney trouble had settled in my back, and I suffered constant suffering. He was unable to straighten himself up from a sitting position that would cause me to cry out. He would take cold very easily and it would always settle in his back. To stoop would become very painful and the kidney secretions would be very irregular and frequent. He had tried a number of remedies without relief. Both Kidney Pills were recommended and procuring a box at Mr. Wallace's Pharmacy, he soon found relief. His back strengthened and the urinary disorders were quickly regulated."

smell like a minstrel man. I bet we'll get some bully press notices tomorrow."

"I wonder what Helen was doing there," Glenister answered irrelevantly, for he had been more shaken by his encounter with her than at his part in the rest of the enterprise, and his mind, which should have been lashed with the flight, held nothing but pictures of her as she stood in the half darkness under the fear of his Winchester. "What if she ever learned who that black ruffian was!" He quailed in the thought.

"Say, Dex, I am going to marry that girl."

"I dunno if you be or not," said Dexty. "Better watch McNamara."

"What?" The younger man stopped and stared. "What do you mean?"

"Go on. Don't stop the horses. I ain't blind. I kin put two an' two together."

"You'll never put those two together. Nonsense! Why, the man's a rascal. I wouldn't let him have her. Besides, it couldn't be. She'll find him out. I love her so much that—oh, my feelings are too big to talk about." He moved his hands eloquently. "You can't understand."

"I'm not," grunted Dexty, but his eyes were level and held the light of the past.

"He may be a rascal," the old man continued, after a little. "I'll put it with you on that, but he's a handsome devil, and as for manners he makes you look like a logger. He's a heap of man too. Them three qualities are irmus cards and warranted to take most any queen in the business—red, white or yellow."

"He dares," growled Glenister, while his thick brows came forward, and ugly lines hardened in his face.

In the gray of the early morning they descended the foothills into the wide valley of the Nome river and Dexty set down the pulling country to the river bluffs, where, obscured and veiled among the willows, was a packer. This they set up, then proceeded to wash the dirt from the sacks carefully, yet with the utmost speed, for there was constant danger of discovery. It was wonderful, this transformation of the filthiest gravel into the cleanest of gold, and the men worked with the most grave and industrious concentration. The gold was weighed, pinched, put into little purses large and small, and then, when the whole was finished, the negroes, who had been left to watch the horses, were called in to receive their portions and rumpled hair.

"Sluice robbers!" she cried breathlessly. "Quick! A holdup! The watchman is hurt!"

A roar shook the night air, and the men poured out past her, while the day shift came tumbling forth from every quarter in various stages of undress.

Some Good Recipes

BOILING Take two cupfuls fresh chopped cocoanut, one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful chopped parsley, half a cupful cream, one teaspoonful of salt, sixteen of fine sugar and grate over all. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff dry froth; mix the butter, add the cocoanut and cream, salt and pepper. Add the sugar by degrees, making the heat as intense as possible and when well mixed and carefully the beaten whites of the eggs. Fill greased individual pie tins and bake in a moderate oven in a baking pan half filled with boiling water and bake twenty minutes or a little over.

COFFEE BREAD—To half pound fresh butter stirred to cream with one half cup of sugar. Add five eggs, stirring well after each egg, then add one warm milk, in which you have dissolved one cent's worth of yeast. Put in milk slowly with one pound sifted flour and the juice of a lemon. Now stir exactly for a full half-hour, then put in a well-greased pan and let rise for two and one-half to three hours in a warm place, until the pan is well within and then from the pan. Bake in moderate oven from 45 minutes to an hour.

BAKED APPLES WITH NUTS—Peel and core the apples, then place in a deep pan, allowing a heaping tablespoonful of sugar and a half cup of water to each apple. In the centre of each apple place a tablespoonful of chopped nuts and a strip of lemon or orange peel, and over the whole sprinkle cinnamon and nutmeg. Bake very slowly and the juice will become jelly-like.

CREAM GRAVY.—After frying any kind of meat remove from frying pan and instead of putting water in to the pan pour milk, or still better milk and cream, and thicken with flour as for any gravy.

CREAM FINNAN HADDIE.—Take one-half pound of finnan haddie, pick apart and cook in one heaping tablespoonful of butter till heated through but not brown; in one tablespoonful of flour moistened in one cupful of cream, or rich milk, and let it cook for five minutes; add the yolks of one egg, a dash of pepper, and one teaspoonful of grated onion. Where smooth serve immediately on hot toast and garnish with parsley.

OYSTER RAREBIT—Drain and pick over a pint of oysters. Scald them in their own liquor until the edges curl, then drain, remove the mussel and place where they will keep hot. Break half a pound rich, soft cheese into small bits, put it into a saucepan with a tablespoonful butter, quarter of a teaspoonful salt, a dash of cayenne pepper, and a salt-spoonful of mustard. Pour the strained oyster liquor over two eggs slightly beaten. Place the cheese over the fire and stir constantly. As it melts add gradually the oyster liquor and eggs. When soft and creamy add the oysters, let heat one minute then turn out on hot toast and serve.

CREAMY SAUCE.—Beat one-quarter cup of butter and one cup of powdered sugar to a cream, add one teaspoonful of vanilla and two tablespoonfuls of juice from preserved fruit and beat well. When ready to serve add one-quarter cup of boiling water and stir then the well-beaten white of one egg and beat until the whole is foamy.

PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS

A few friends and acquaintances gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ferguson, Fetzer Mills, on Tuesday evening, Oct. 14th, to give them a little send off before they leave for their new home in Napanee. They also remembered Mrs. Howse who will reside with her daughter Mrs. Ferguson.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson and Mrs. Howse—We, a few of your friends and neighbors, gathered here this the eve of your departure from us to spend a pleasant evening together and tell you how sorry we are to part with you.

We want to say to you that our sympathy in the hour of your sorrow, and our congratulations in the hour of your joy, are simply natural. You have all passed through the deepest waters of affliction and trials, and have proved yourselves true friends and helpers in the hour of need, and patient sufferers.

We are sorry to part with you, but we realize that we cannot keep you, however much we would like to, but Mr. Ferguson, a native of Napanee, and Mrs. Howse, a native of Port Hope, have left nothing undone to make your stay among us pleasant, and we feel that we have always had your sympathy in your labors, and that you have done your best in order that in the end that the benefit might be yours. We feel grateful for your kindness to us, and Mr. Ferguson, on behalf of friends present, desires to say to you, Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson, Mr. Howse, that we have always found you willing to help us in any way you could, and we feel sorry to part with you, but we realize that we cannot keep you, however much we would like to, but as a community we have found you good citizens and those whom we like to have among us.

We also wish to say to you, Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson, that we have always found you kind and obliging, and Mr. Howse, we have found you kind and obliging, and Mr. Howse, we have found you kind and obliging, and Mr. Howse, we have

1858 Jubilee Services 1908

Newburgh Methodist Church

The fiftieth anniversary of the dedication of the Methodist Church, Newburgh, will be fittingly celebrated on Sunday and Monday next, in that historic village. Great interest is being taken in this celebration, and a brief account of the early records and the programme for next Sunday and Monday will, we feel sure, be read with interest by our many readers.

The early records of this, the pioneer Church of Newburgh, may almost be called the early history of Newburgh. It is one of the first churches built in the old historic Bay of Quinte district, and for some years was the only Church in Newburgh.

At first it was a part of the old Napanee circuit when the Ministers received their appointment "to-day at large." In 1851 it was made the head of a circuit, with the Rev. Joseph Reynolds in charge.

The first and only Church built previous to the present one was erected about 1841. It was one of the old-style plain structures, with a large platform in front, long benches, no seats, and the "old-fashioned high pulpit." Tallow candles were used for illumination. The site selected on the southwest corner of the site of the present Church. At the time of its erection the street had not been opened and the congregation had to pass through a gate to reach their door. How times change! Those of the congregation who had to travel for some distance in the country after the evening service could hear the sweet-voiced bell ring in Dolc, during the past quarter of a century. The work of erecting the present Church was begun, and the Church was finished and dedicated two years after, in the Fall of the first year of the Superintendency of the Rev. Gifford Dorey, who was called Another Day. The stones used in the construction were taken by Heathy, Benjamin Files, and were dressed by Brother Matthew Bowell, father of the Rev. Manley Benson, D.D., who is to conduct our Jubilee Services. The building, which was designed by William Cavendish, was the model of the Sydenham St. Church in Kingston, will it must pay accommodation for 700 persons, and was built at a cost of about $2,500.

REV. MANLEY BENSON, D.D.
A Newburgh boy, who will preach special sermons next Sunday, both morning and evening.

D. A. NESBIT, B.A., LL.S.
The Present S. S. Superintendent.

The Dedicatory Services was conducted on the 17th of October, 1858, by the Rev. Dr. Stinson. At the latter services in the day sermons were delivered by the Revs. Charles Fish and W. Shilton, and on the following Sabbath by the Revs. Lachlan and S. Sellery, A.M. On the Thursday next we find the 18th the event was taken by the Wilson, Rev. Messrs. Dyson, and Jeffers, and on Monday the Rev. Dr. Stinson, Rev. S. Youngs, W. Johnson, Dr. Stevens, Wroodsworth, and Chapman. Interesting of the two services with the Rev. Dr. Stinson's sermon, and subscriptions amounted to the handsome sum of $1,000, which has been paid off many years since. To this noble, self-sacrificing work of the fathers we have fallen heirs, and we all owe a debt of gratitude to them, and to their daughters.

Among those who took a deep interest in the building of the new Church, and for many years stood true to the cause, are the following:

John Reid, Cephas Miller, Dr. I. Benjamin, Thomas Madden, John Farley, Benjamin Files, Matthew Bowell, D. B. Stickney, J. B. Aylesworth, who has been a Steward for many years, and Trustee since. Revs. Messrs. D. W. McCormell, Mr. E. S. Hurck, Mr. D. B. Stickney, all but four of whom are still living.

More proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cures sick women.

Miss M. R. Morin, 535 Ontario St., Montreal, writes to Mrs. Pinkham: "I was in very poor health and doctored for months, receiving very little benefit. I had lost all ambition, was nervous, and subject to dizzy spells and painful periods each month.

"A friend suggested Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as the proper medicine for me. I procured a bottle of this remedy and began taking, and before it was finished, I felt so much better that I continued its use and gave it a thorough test, with the result I am to-day well and a much healthier girl than I was three years ago. I have no more painful periods, dizziness or nervous troubles."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

NEWS NOTES.

The Socialist Congress at Brussels decided to use every effort to prevent an outbreak of hostilities in the Balkans.

The coroner's jury exonerated the motorman in the case of the fatal injuries inflicted upon Dr. Ferguson by a street car.

Luman C. Mann, son of a wealthy Oak Park man, has been arrested at Chicago, in connection with the murder of Fanny Gilmore, formerly of Toronto and Wingham.

A party of fishermen arrived at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., with a boat in which bullet holes were plainly visible. They got a new craft and returned to Lake Superior. They are supposed to be the party of poachers who were fired on by Canadian game wardens.

LETTER FROM NEW HAMPSHIRE

New Hillsboro, October 21st, 1903

To the Editor of Napanee Beaver:

Dear Sir,—Having received from my father, Mr. Wm. Coulter, a copy of your paper, I read with interest the letter from Mr. Grose, and as I am a native of Ontario, and have lived in the county of Hastings for many years, I thought I would write you a few lines.

I left Ontario for the United States in the year 1866, and settled in Hillsboro, New Hampshire, where I have lived ever since. I have been very successful in my business, and have a good home, and am surrounded by all the comforts of life. I have been back to Ontario many times, and have visited all the old places and friends, but I must say that I have never seen a country that I like as well as this. The climate is much milder, the winters are not so severe, and the summers are cooler. The land is very productive, and the crops are large. Corn, potatoes, oats, hay and apples are the principal crops. Wheat is not raised to any extent. Dairying is the principal business, and there are large creameries in all the towns. Cheese factories are not common. Cattle, sheep and hogs are raised in large numbers. Fruit of all kinds grows well, and the markets are always good. Hillsboro is a town of about 4,000 inhabitants, and is the county seat of Hillsboro County. It is situated on the Contoocook River, which furnishes water power for many manufacturing establishments. The Contoocook River is a tributary of the Merrimack River, which flows into the Atlantic Ocean at Newburyport, Mass. Hillsboro is 75 miles from Boston, 50 miles from Concord, the capital of the State, and 30 miles from Manchester, the largest city in the State. Hillsboro is connected with Boston by the Boston & Maine Railroad, and with Concord and Manchester by the Concord & Montreal Railroad. Hillsboro has a fine system of graded schools, a high school, a public library, a national bank, a savings bank, a weekly newspaper, and a number of churches. The Congregational Church is the largest and finest church building in the town. It has a seating capacity of about 1,000, and cost about $75,000. The Methodist Church is a fine building, and has a seating capacity of about 600. The Baptist Church is a fine building, and has a seating capacity of about 500. The Catholic Church is a fine building, and has a seating capacity of about 500. The Episcopal Church is a fine building, and has a seating capacity of about 500. The Universalist Church is a fine building, and has a seating capacity of about 500. The Unitarian Church is a fine building, and has a seating capacity of about 500. The Salvation Army has a fine building, and has a seating capacity of about 500. The Y. M. C. A. has a fine building, and has a seating capacity of about 500. The Y. W. C. A. has a fine building, and has a seating capacity of about 500. The Boys' Club has a fine building, and has a seating capacity of about 500. The Girls' Club has a fine building, and has a seating capacity of about 500. The Boys' Brigade has a fine building, and has a seating capacity of about 500. EVENING RECITAL.

Miss Luella Hall, who has lately returned from the Toronto Conservatory of Music, will on the evening of Thursday, October 29th, give a piano recital in the Town Hall. On this occasion Miss Hall will be assisted by Miss Margaret Louden Shepherd, contralto soloist of the Metropolitan Church, Toronto. Miss Shepherd has delighted the people of Napanee on previous occasions. It is to be hoped that these young ladies will be greeted by a large audience. Admission, 25c. Further particulars next week.

SERIOUS FIRE.

Wednesday night fire broke out in Mr. Arch. Caton's barn on the Newburgh road, completely destroying it and the straw house. They succeeded in saving the cattle, but about seventy pigs and the machinery became a prey to the flames. Fortunately the house, which is near the barn, was saved after hard work. It is a mystery how the fire originated as Mr. Caton and his two men were at the barn ten minutes before it started, and had not been in that part of the barn at all. Loss partly covered by insurance. Mr. Caton is fortunate in having a second barn containing about 30 tons of hay for feed. His corn is still in the field and also about 40 loads of millet and buckwheat. A new cement silo just completed stood very close to the barn, but is apparently uninjured from the heat.

JNO. R. SAYFRS, President

Jubilee Service at Newburgh

Fifty years ago last Saturday, Oct. 17, 1858, the Newburgh Methodist Church was dedicated to the worship of God. For half a century it has stood as a monument to the faith and zeal of the loyal sons and daughters of Methodism in Newburgh and vicinity. In the good providence of God the church has been preserved and made useful in a multitude of ways, and today it is one of the land-marks of early Methodism in the Bay of Quinte district.

In 1856, under the superintendency of Rev. T. Pugh, the undertaking was com-menced, and to the untiring zeal and dili-gence of this pastor the church was in-debted for this splendid new church. The building was designed by William Hay, of Toronto, from the model of Nyden-ham Street Church, Kingston. The total cost was about $2,500, and at the dedication only $400 of debt remained, which had long since been paid off.

The opening services commenced on Sun-day, Oct. 17th, when Rev. Dr. Rice, for Stan-son preached the dedication sermon, sel-mons being delivered later in the day by Revs. C. Fish and W. Stephenson, and on the following Sabbath by Revs. J. Lavell and S. S. Sellev. A tea meeting was held the following Monday night, when the choir was led by D. Wilson, Esq. Mayor of Picton, and addresses were delivered by Revs. S. Young, Dr. Taylor, English Dr. Stillson, W. Stephenson and C. Fish.

The celebration of the Jubilee of this church, which was resolved on some time ago, and which has received considerable attention, and will long remain in the memo-ries of those who have been privileged to be present at the services held on Sunday last. The weather was ideal, and the congre-gations of the day and night were large and appreciative. The choir of the church, assisted by Mr. Wm. Chant (the son of one of the first members of the choir), and Miss Ethel Lake, of Napanee, rendered special music at each of the services, and the singing was congregational throughout the day. Miss Pearl A. Nesbit, organist of the church, deserves unstinted praise for the splendid service she rendered at every service on both Sundays and on Monday night. Her work upon the organ was of a very high order, and was a relaxation of distinc-tion exhibited by an organist to those who had not heard her before. Under her direction the choir also excelled them-selves, and contributed largely to the success of the celebration. Miss Mina Phillips, of Wellers, who was heard in this part of the country for the first time, completely captivated the large audiences, singing a solo at each ser-vice on Sunday. Miss Phillips possesses a soprano voice of highest quality, of unusual power and flexibility. Always under perfect control, her voice has the clearness of tone and depth of feeling and sweetness, which win at once the hearts of her hearers. It is sincerely hoped that Miss Phillips may be heard here again. Mrs. (Dr.) H. A. Ness, of Lansdowne, the other soloist, also de-lighted every one. Mrs. Nesbit's is a delightful contralto voice, and Mrs. Ness and her refined expression and distinct-ness of enunciation add to its charm. The congregations are to be congratulated on their choice of soloists. A quartet as rendered during the day by Mrs. G. B. Thompson and Mr. Peters Nesbit, was beautifully rendered.

The final supper on Monday night be-came the consummation of the Jubilee celebration. It was a remarkable success from every point of view. The tables in the old church was crowded, and the ladies catered to the wants of all in a most hitch. That a programme of three and a half hours' duration should have held only a crowded gathering to the end is a conclusive proof that it was well arranged and carried out. Rev. W. Stephenson, who presided, was at his best as the genial pastor that he was at a Jubilee gathering in his own church. Addresses were delivered by the pastors of the Methodist congregations in the village, and by Rev. Mr. Fish, of the Presbyterian church, and Rev. Mr. Lavell, of the Anglican church, who also led in prayer. Letters of congratulation were read from Rev. Dr. Rice, Rev. Dr. Stillson, Rev. S. Young, Rev. Dr. Taylor, Rev. W. Stephenson, and Rev. C. Fish. The letter from Rev. Dr. Rice was particularly interesting, as it was the first time that the doctor had been absent from the Jubilee services and bowl sup-per since the celebration began in 1858. The letter from Rev. Dr. Stillson was also read, and was a most interesting production. Rev. Dr. Stillson was pastor of the church in 1858, and his letter was a most interesting review of the work done in the church during the fifty years of its history. It was a happy thought to have the letter read, as it brought the pastorates of the past very vividly before the congregation, and many were the practical words of advice and encourage-ment which could be supplied to our young church by Methodism. An honored leader in the Canadian church, Rev. Dr. Stillson has yet an active share in and the strong in-terest in the welfare of the church, and his words on this occasion were greatly appreci-ated by the congregation. In an interesting address Rev. Mr. Hooper, who was pastor of the church in 1878, gave many reminis-cences of Newburgh, where his education-al work began, and where people by hund-reds are affecting things for them and the kindness and encouragement he received. The happy reminiscences of the pastorates of Rev. Mr. Lavell and Rev. Mr. Sellev were also full of practical interest in this old home church. In addition to the pastors of the church, Rev. Mr. Thanksgiving, A. Smith, Rev. Mr. Hooper, Rev. Mr. Lavell, Rev. Mr. Sellev, Rev. Mr. Fish, Rev. Mr. Stephenson, Rev. Mr. Young, Rev. Dr. Taylor, Rev. Mr. Rice, Rev. Mr. Stillson

The Joy of Forgiveness. Psalm 32. Golden Text—Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered. Psalm 32:1.

What is implied in the forgiveness of a man's sins?

What is a man who is forgiven as good a man, in all respects, as if he had never sinned? Verse 2. Which is the true gospel, that will actually make a man a fresh, new man, and makes him truly good, or that his sins are "covered" and the robe of Christ's righteousness, and although he is still a sinner, God just imputes it to him?

How would you describe a true christian? What blessings are promised to others who are not christians?

Verses 3-5. Describe the state of mind of a man who is conscious of being guilty of sin, but refuses to confess it.

Compare these facts, one who hesitates the value of food in his soul, and another who refuses to feed it, and tell which is the wiser, what is the difference between the two, and which is responsible for all human beings?

Verses 6-7. Show which verse has to do with the church and their common sense duty to guide their people, and which is addressed to individuals.

Verses 8-9. Show how the Lord promises instruction to the individual, and warns against unreasonableness.

Verses 10-11. Show how to avoid those which fill them and bring obedient to the will of God. What is the difference between the possible to all human beings, and the "saints" who "walk in the light as he is in the light"? Verse 11. Is it the duty of every christian to be glad? Is it the duty of every christian to rejoice?

The Joy of Forgiveness. Psalm 32.

Golden Text—Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered. Psalm 32:1.

Verse 1—What is implied in the forgiveness of a man's sin?

It is man who is forgiven as good a man in all respects, as if he had never sinned? Does this mean the true, gospel, and God justifies wicked men? Does it mean that his sins are "remitted" and "covered" and "not imputed" to him, although he is still a sinner, and God does not describe a man "in whose spirit there is no guile"?

Verse 2—How does a true Christian possess that kind of forgiveness? Is he one who is not "christians"?

Verses 3-5—Describe the state of mind of a man who is always going contrary to conscience.

Compare two men, one who hides the sins of his heart and another who listens to that voice and confesses his sins, and then after the habits of these men will have upon the health of their souls.

What is it in a man which turns his thoughts into the channels of sensuality? Is it true blessings into curses?

Verse 6—What are inevitable the results of a full confession and forsaking of sin?

Does forgiveness always follow such a confession? Does God always forgive?

Verses 7-9—Is it true of us that God Hides us from trouble at one time and another?

Can we have any more important subject than to be delivered from the curse and eternal misery?

Should it be their aim or desire of learning their harmful things short of actual experience?

Animals learn how to avoid things which hurt them and become afraid of them. Is it possible to all human beings? Is it a good Verse 10—What contrast is made between the wicked and the righteous in the matter of trouble?

Verse 11—Is it the duty and privilege of all to rejoice in the Lord?

Is it true that the essential qualities for the real understanding of it consist? Two things—the heart and the will? Is it true that the moment of the first exercise of faith for salvation is the moment of the first exercise of love?

LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

To the Editor of The Beaver:

In last week's Express appeared a few reasons given by a life-long Conservative to why he was going to vote for Wallbridge.

In return, let me, a life-long Liberal, who has supported Liberalism for the past twenty years, give you a few reasons why I am going to support, and use my influence as well, to aid in the election of Mr. Uriah Wilson.

I am going to support Mr. Wilson because he is a clever, able man, and one who cannot be bribed or bulldozed into supporting any measure of any government which is not in the interests of the people of Lennox and Addington.

I am going to support Mr. Wilson because he is a supporter of Mr. R. L. Borden, whom I believe to be an honest man, and one who would not keep in his employ such people as Mr. Middleman, of whom I read in your last issue.

I am going to support Mr. Wilson because he is an honored business man, a gentleman, and of unimpeachable character and standing in these communities. I have known him personally all my life and, although not supporting him, have always found him to be a gentleman worthy of support on call my friend.

Mr. Wilson's election is rendered by even the staunchest Liberal, and it is only a question of whether the majority will be 500 or upwards. My Liberal friends will give this matter the serious consideration that I have done. I am perfectly satisfied that they will swell Mr. Wilson's majority to nearly 1,000.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space in your very fair and unbiased news paper, I remain,

Yours very truly,

LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

To the Editor of The Beaver:

In last week's Express appeared a few reasons given by a life-long Conservative to why he was going to vote for Wallbridge.

In return, let me, a life-long Liberal, who has supported Liberalism for the past twenty years, give you a few reasons why I am going to support, and use my influence as well, to aid in the election of Mr. Uriah Wilson.

I am going to support Mr. Wilson because he is a clever, able man, and one who cannot be bribed or bulldozed into supporting any measure of any government which is not in the interests of the people of Lennox and Addington.

I am going to support Mr. Wilson because he is a supporter of Mr. R. L. Borden, whom I believe to be an honest man, and one who would not keep in his employ such people as Mr. Middleman, of whom I read in your last issue.

I am going to support Mr. Wilson because he is an honored business man, a gentleman, and of unimpeachable character and standing in these communities. I have known him personally all my life and, although not supporting him, have always found him to be a gentleman worthy of support on call my friend.

Mr. Wilson's election is rendered by even the staunchest Liberal, and it is only a question of whether the majority will be 500 or upwards. My Liberal friends will give this matter the serious consideration that I have done. I am perfectly satisfied that they will swell Mr. Wilson's majority to nearly 1,000.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space in your very fair and unbiased news paper, I remain,

Yours very truly,

CAMPBELLCROFT MACKENZIE

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John Mackenzie, in North Lingan at The Limekilns, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Oct. 15th, when their daughter was solemnized in marriage to Mr. Frederick Campbellcroft, of Deseronto. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. A. Macpherson, of Chalmers Presbyterian church, Kingston. The bride was given away by her father, was attired in cream duchesse satin and carried a bouquet of white and red bridal roses. Miss Sadie Mackenzie, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, wearing soft grey with lace. CRAIG-HINCH

A very pleasant event took place in Kingston on Sept. 27th when Miss Gertrude E. Hinch, of this town, was united in matrimony to Mr. Will Ed. Craig, of Amherst street Methodist church officiating. The only friends present were an uncle, Mr. W. Hinch, of Ernestown Station, and a cousin, Mr. I. Burt, of Millhaven. The bride, who is well and favorably known, was unattended, and was prettily attired in a skirt of cream cashmere, with silk ribbon trimmings and white liberty silk blouse, and wore a white velvet hat trimmed with white satin and large white plume. After spending a few days with relatives at Myrtle and Ernestown, the happy couple left on Friday for their future home at Bellamy's Mills, Mr. Craig's handsome son in wishing them every happiness in their married life.

A LESSON IN GIVING

Nanne had a bright silver dollar given her. She asked her papa to change it into dimes.

"What is that for, dear?" he asked.

"Jesus said: 'Freely ye have got, freely out of it." And when she got it into smaller coins she laid out one of the ten. Then she said: "I will keep that until Sunday." And when Sunday came she went to the Band of Hope meeting in their Sunday-school and dropped in two dimes.

"Why," said her father as he heard the last one drop, "I thought you gave one dime to the Lord."

"I did not give that dime to him, and I didn't give him what is his own," she said. "I gave him something I have to give him what is mine—obedience."

The Best Flour.

Dafoe's Nonesuch
Dafoe's Manitoba Patent

By numerous tests by the above mentioned grades have been proved to be the best flours in the world. When buying flour, don't be persuaded into using some other brand unless you are perfectly satisfied that it is equal to Dafoe's, which has to be tried only a few times to convince you that it reaches you in the best condition. The grocer certainly has no reason for trying to substitute Dafoe's for another flour just as good, but to make a few cents more on it. Insist on having Dafoe's and if you are not more than pleased with it, return the empty bag to your grocer and get your money back. Dafoe's flour is guaranteed to be the best.

Always demand and see that you get Dafoe's when you buy flour. Feed grain is also in the market for the different kinds of grain.

The Spoilers.

By REX E. BEACH.

She was thinking again, "If only you had not acted as you did." She longed to help him now in his trouble as he had helped her, but what could she do? The law was such a confusing, intricate, perplexing thing.

"I spent last night at the Midas," she told him, "and rode back early this morning. That was a daring holdup, wasn't it?"

"What holdup?"

"Why, haven't you heard the news?"

"No," he answered steadily. "I just got up."

Your claim was robbed. Three men overcame the watchman at midnight and cleaned the boxes."

His simulation of excited astonishment was perfect, and he raised a shower of questions upon her. She noted with approval that he did not look her in the eye, however. He was not an accomplished liar. Now, McNamara had a countenance of iron. Unconsciously she made comparison, and the young man at her side did not lose thereby.

"Yes, I saw it all," she concluded, after recounting the details. "The negro wanted to bind me so that I could not give the alarm, but his efforts prevented. He was a most gallant darky."

"What did you do when they left?"

"Why, I kept my word and waited until they were out of sight; then, I passed the camp and set Mr. McNamara and his men right after them down the gulch."

"Down the gulch?" spoke Glenister, off his guard.

"Yes, of course. Did you think they went upstream?" She was looking squarely at him now, and he dropped his eyes. "No; the posse started in that direction, but I put them right."

There was an odd light in her glance, and he felt the blood drumming in his ears.

She sent them downstream! So that was why there had been no pursuit! Then she must suspect—she must know everything! Glenister was stunned. Again his love for the girl surged tumultuously; it shut him and demanded expression. But Miss Chester, no longer a feeling sure that she had the situation in hand, had already started to return to the hotel. "I saw the men distinctly," she told him before they separated, "and I could identify them all."

At his own house Glenister found Dextry removing the stains of the night's adventure.

"Miss Chester recognized us last night," he announced.

"How do you know?"

"She told me so just now, and what's more she sent McNamara and his crowd down the creek instead of up. That's why we got away so easily."

"Well, well—ain't she a brick? She's even with us now. By the way, I wonder how much we cleaned up, anyhow—let's weigh it." Going to the bed, Dextry turned back the blankets, exposing four moosehide sacks, wet and heavy, where he had thrown them.

"There must have been $20,000 with what I gave Wheaton," said Glenister.

At that moment, without warning, the door was flung open, and as the young man jerked the blankets into place he whirled, snatched the six shooter that Dextry had discarded and covered the entrance.

"Don't shoot, boy!" cried the newcomer, breathlessly. "My, but you're nervous!"

Glenister dropped his gun. It was Cherry Malotte, and from her heaving breast and the flying colors in her cheeks the men saw she had been running. She did not give them time to question, but closed and locked the door while the words came tumbling from her:

"They're on to you, boys—you'd better clear out quick. They're on their way up here now."

"What!"

"What?"

"Quick! I heard McNamara and Voorhees, the marshal, talking. Somebody has spotted you for the holdups. They're on their way now. I tell you, I sneaked out by the back way and came here through the mud. Say, but I'm a sight!" She stamped her trinly booted feet and flirted her skirt.

"I don't savvy what you mean," said Dextry, shaking at his partner warningly. "We don't done nothin'."

"Well, it's all right then. I took a long chance—you could make a getaway if you wanted to—because they've got warrants for you for that sluice robbery last night. Here they are now." She darted to the window, the men peering over her shoulder. Coming up the narrow walk they saw Voorhees, McNamara and three others.

The four sacks were dropped softly into the feathery bottom.

The house stood somewhat isolated and well back on the timber, so that any one approaching it by the planking had an unobstructed view of the premises. Escape was impossible, for the back door led out into the ankle deep puddles of the open prairie, and it was now apparent that a sixth man had made a circuit and was approaching from the rear.

"My God! They'll search the place," said Dextry, and the men looked grimly in each other's faces.

Then in a flash Glenister stripped back the blankets and seized the "spokes," heaping into the bunk room. In another instant he returned with them and faced desperately the cauldl bareness of the little room that they lived and slept in. Nothing could be hidden; it was folly to think of it. There was a loft overhead, he remembered hopefully, then realized that the pursuers would search there first of all.

"I told you he was a hard fighter," said Dextry as the quick footsteps grew louder. "He ain't no fool, neither. 'Stead of our bein' caught in the mountains, I reckon we'll shoot it out here. We should have cached that gold somewhere."

He spun the cylinder of his blackened Colt, while his face grew hard and vulture-like.

Meanwhile Cherry Malotte watched the hunted look in Glenister's face grow wilder and then stiffen into the stubbornness of a man at bay. The posse was at the door now, knocking. The three inside stood rigid and strained. Then Glenister tossed his burden on the bed.

"Go into the back room, Cherry; there's going to be trouble."

"What's there?" inquired Dextry through the door, to gain time. Suddenly, without a word, the girl glided to the hot blast heater, now cold and empty, which stood in a corner of the room. These stoves, used widely in the north, are vertical iron cylinders into which coal is poured from above. She lifted the lid and peered in to find it a quarter full of dead ashes, then turned with shining eyes and parted lips to Glenister. He caught the hint, and in an instant the four sacks were dropped softly into the feathery bottom and the ashes raked over. The daring maneuver was almost as quick as the flash of woman's wit that prompted it and was carried through while the answer to Dextry's question was still unspoken.

Then Glenister opened the door carelessly and admitted the crowd of men.

"We've got a search warrant to look through your house," said Voorhees.

"What are you looking for?"

"Gold dust from Anvil creek."

"All right—search away."

They rapidly scoured the premises, covering every inch, paying no heed to the girl, who watched them with indifferent eyes, nor to the old man, who glared at their every movement. Glenister was carelessly sarcastic, although he kept his right arm free, while beneath his sangfroid was a thoroughly trained alertness.

McNamara directed the search with a manner wholly lacking in his former mock courtesy. It was as though he had been soured by the gall of defeat. The mask had fallen off now, and his character showed—insistent, overbearing, cruel. Toward the partners he preserved a contemptuous silence.

The intruders ransacked thoroughly, while a dozen times the hearts of Cherry Malotte and her two companions stopped, then bound onward, as McNamara or Voorhees approached, then passed the stove. At last Voorhees lifted the lid and peered into its dark interior. At the same instant the girl cried out sharply, flinging herself from her position while the marshal jerked his head back in time to see her dash upon Dextry.

"Don't! Don't!" She cried her appeal to the old man. "Keep cool. You'll be sorry, Dex—they're almost through."

The officer had not seen any movement on Dextry's part, but doubtless her quick eye had detected signs of violence. McNamara emerged, glowering, from the back room at that moment.

"Let them hunt," the girl was saying, while Dextry stared dazedly over her head. "They won't find anything. Keep cool and don't act rash."

Voorhees' duties sat uncomfortably upon him at the best, and, looking at the smoldering eyes of the two men, he became averse to further search in a powdery household whose members itched to shoot him in the back.

"It isn't here," he reported, but the politician only scowled, then spoke for the first time directly to the partners:

"I've got warrants for both of you, and I'm tempted to take you in, but I won't. I'm not through yet—not by any means. I'll get you—get you both." He turned out of the door, followed by the marshal, who called off his guards, and the group filed back along the walk.

"Say, you're a jewel, Cherry. You've saved us twice. You caught Voorhees just in time. My heart hit my palate when he looked into that stove, but the next instant I wanted to laugh at Dextry's expression."

Impulsively Glenister laid his hands upon her shoulders. At his look and touch her face slowly crimsoned, her bosom heaved and the silken lids fluttered until she seemed choked by a very flood of sweet womanliness. She blushed like a little maid and laughed a timid, broken laugh. Then, pulling herself together, the merry, carefree tone came into her voice, and her cheeks grew cool and clear.

"You wouldn't trust me at first, eh? Some day you'll find that your old friends are the best after all."

And as she left them she added mockingly:

"Say, you're a pair of 'shine' despoilers. You need a governess."

CHAPTER XI.

A RAW, gray day, with a driving drizzle from seaward and a leaden rack of clouds drifting low, matched the sullen, fitful mood of Glenister.

During the last month he had chafed and fretted like an animal in trash for word of Wheaton. This uncertainty, this impotent waiting with folded hands, was maddening to one of his spirit. He could apply himself to no fixed duty, for the sense of his wrong preyed on him heavily, and he found himself hating the vanity of the Midas, gazing at it from afar, grasping hungrily for each scrap of news as chanced to reach him. McNamara allowed access to none but his minions, so the partners knew but vaguely of what happened on their property, even though, under fetion of the law, it was being worked for their production.

No steps regarding a speedy hearing of the cases were allowed, and the confusion between Judge Stillman and the receiver had become so generally recognized that there were uneasy mutterings and threats in many quarters. Yet, although the politician had by now virtually alienated all the richest properties in the district and wrecked them through his hirelings, the people of Nome, as a whole, did not grasp the full turpitude of the scheme nor the system's perfect working.

Strange to say, Dextry, the fire eater, had assumed an oriental attitude quite foreign to his peppery disposition and

A MONTREAL MAN
Run-down, Sick and Despondent Because He Had Failed to Get Help.
RESTORED TO HEALTH BY VINOL.
"I was in a very run-down condition. Appetite lower and lower all the time and my digestion was out of order. I suffered. I lost flesh and strength and was in a very bad way altogether. I was under different doctors' care but did not derive any material benefit from their treatment.
This state of affairs went on for several months and I became very despondent and thought I would never be well again. My attention was then drawn to Vinol and I purchased a bottle from Bryson's drug store. The first bottle did me good so I continued its use, and am to-day as well as ever I was. I also had Vinol as a splendid remedy for colds." Alfred J. Linn, 1987 Delorimier Avenue, Montreal, Quebec.
This is because Vinol is a genuine tonic and body-builder which contains peptonate of iron together with every one of the body-building medicinal elements of cod liver oil, but without an drop of oil to upset the stomach and retard its work. Vinol acts directly upon the stomach, creates a healthy appetite, and enables the digestive organs to obtain the necessary elements from the food eaten to make rich, red blood, healthy flesh, and muscle tissue and create strength.

spent much of his time in the hills prospecting.

On this day, as the clouds broke about noon, clear down on the angry horizon a drift of smoke appeared, shortly resolving itself into a steamer. She lay to in the offing, and through his glasses Glenister saw that it was the Roanoke. As the hours passed and no boat put off, he tried to hire a crew, but the longshoremen grew wisely and shook their heads as they watched the surf.

"There's the devil of an undertow settin' along this beach," they told him, "and the water's too cold to drownd in comfortable." So he laid firm hands upon his impatience.

Every day meant many dollars to the waterer, and yet it seemed that nature was fresolute in thwarting him, for that night the wind freshened, and daylight saw the ship lugging the lee of Sledge island, miles to the westward, while the surf, white as boiling milk, boomed and thundered against the shore.

Word had gone through the street that Bill Wheaton was aboard with a writ or a subpoena or an alibi or what-ever was necessary to put the "kibosh" on McNamara, so public excitement grew. McNamara boarded his gold in the Alaska bank, and it was taken for granted that there would be the scene of the struggle. No one supposed for an instant that the usurper would part with the treasure peaceably.

On the third morning the ship lay abreast of the town again, and a lifeboat was seen to make off from her, whereupon the idle population streamed toward the beach.

"She'll make it to the surf all right, but then watch out."

"We'd better make ready to haul 'em out," said another. "It's mighty dangerous." And, sure enough, as the skiff came rushing in through the breakers she was caught.

She had made it past the first line, soaring over the bar on a foamy roller crest like a storm driven gull winding in toward the land. The two figures of Bill Wheaton crouched in the stern, while two sailors fought with their oars. As they gathered for their push through the last zone of froth a great comber rose out of the sea behind them, curled high above their heads, the crowd on the surf's edge shouted. The boat wavered, sucked back into the seething angry mass, and with a crash the dinghy capsized them. There remained nothing but a swirling tide of foam, in which the lifeboat swept bottom up amid a tangle of oars, gratings and gear.

Men rushed into the water, and the next roller pounded them back upon the marble hard sand. There came the sound of splitting wood, and then a group surged in waist deep and bore out a dripping figure. It was a bemoaning bearded seaman, who shook the water from his mane and grinned when his breath had come.

A step farther down the beach the bystanders seized a limp form which the tide rolled to them. It was the second sailor, his scalp split from brow of the gunwale. Nowhere was Wheaton.

Glenister had plunged to the rescue first a heaving line about his middle and, although buffeted about, he had reached the wreck, only to miss sight of the lawyer utterly. He had time for but a glance when he was drawn backward by the undertow till the line at his waist grew taut, then the water surged over him and he was hurled high upon the beach again. He staggered dizzily back to the struggle, when suddenly a wave lifted the capsized cutter and pitched it, end out from beneath what the form of Wheaton, grimly clutching the life ropes. They brought him in choking and breathless.

"I got it," he said, slapping his streaming breast. "It's all right, Glenister. I knew what delay meant, so I took a long chance with the surf." The terrific ordeal he had undergone had blanched him to the lips, his legs wabbled uncertainly, and he would have fallen but for the young man, who thrust an arm about his waist and led him up into the town.

"I went before the circuit court of appeals in Tritow," he explained later, "and they issued orders allowing an appeal from this court and give me a writ of supersedeas directed against old Judge Stillman. That takes the litigation out of his hands altogether and gives McNamara's claim to the Midas and all the gold he's got. What do you think of that? I did better than I expected."

Glenister wrung his hand silently, while a great satisfaction came upon him. At last this would be over, and his peaceful yielding to injustice had borne fruit—had proved the better course after all, as the girl had counseled. He could go to her now with clean hands. The mine was his again. He would lay it at her feet. She had once more of his love and the change it was working in him. He would make her see it—make her see beneath the harshness his years in the wild had given him his love for her was gentle and true and all absorbing. He would bid her be patient till she saw he had mastered himself, till he could come with his soul in harness.

Having placed their documents on record at the courthouse, the two men continued to McNamara's office. He met them with—that is, if McNamara hasn't slated it."

"Yes; all that's necessary is to file the documents, and we've got the judge and McNamara. You'll be back on Anvil creek tomorrow."

"I've certified copies of these orders with the clerk of the court ten minutes ago, and now I make formal demand upon you to turn over the Midas to Messrs. Glenister and Dextry and also to return all the gold dust in your safe deposit boxes in accordance with this writ." He handed his documents to McNamara, who tossed them on his desk without examination.

"Well," said the politician quietly, "I won't do it."

Had he been slapped in the face the attorney would not have been more astonished.

"Why—you"—

"I won't do it, I said!" McNamara repeated sharply. "Don't think for a minute that I haven't gone into this fight armed for everything. Writ of supersedeas! Bah!" He snapped his fingers.

"We'll see whether you'll obey or not," said Wheaton, and when he and Glenister were outside he continued:

"Let's get to the judge quick."

As they neared the golden Gate one told they spied McNamara entering. It was evident that he had slipped from the rear door of his office and he was then to the judicial e

"I don't like that," said Glenister. "He's up to something."

So it appeared, for they were fifteen minutes in gaining access to the mysterious and then found McNamara with him. Both men were astounded at the change in Stillman's appearance. During the last month his mouth had sunk and shrunk and altered until vacillation was betrayed in every line, and he had acquired the habit of furtively watching McNamara's slightest movement. It seemed that the part he played sat heavily upon him.

The judge examined the papers perfunctorily, and, although his air was deliberate, his fingers made clumsy work of it. At last he said:

"I regret that I am forced to doubt the authenticity of these documents."

"My lawyers, man!" Wheaton cried. "They're certified copies of orders from your superior court. They grant the appeal that you have denied us, and take the case out of your hands altogether. You, and they, order the man to surrender the mine and everything connected with it. Now, sir, we want you to enforce these orders."

Stillman glanced at the silent man in the window and replied:

"You will, of course, proceed regularly and make application in court in the proper way, but I tell you now that I won't do anything in the matter."

Wheaton stared at him fixedly until the old man snapped out:

"You say they are certified copies. How do I know they are? The signatures may all be false. Maybe you signed them yourself."

The lawyer grew very white at this and stammered until Glenister drew him out of the room.

"Come, come," he said; "we'll carry this thing through in open court. Maybe he's nervous and will go back on himself. McNamara has him hypnotized, but he won't dare refuse to obey the orders of the circuit court of appeals."

"He won't, eh? Well, what do you think he's doing right now?" said Wheaton. "I must think. This is the boldest game I ever played in. They told me things while I was in 'Frisco which I couldn't believe, but I guess they're true. Judges don't disobey the orders of their courts of appeal unless there is power back of them."

They proceeded to the attorney's office, but had not been there long before Shiplack Simms burst in upon them.

"Hell to pay!" he panted. "McNamara's taking your dust out of the bank."

She was thinking again, "If only you had not acted as you did." She longed to help him now in his trouble as he had helped her, but what could she do? The law was such a confusing, intricate, perplexing thing.

"I spent last night at the Midas," she told him, "and rode back early this morning. That was a daring holdup, wasn't it?"

"What holdup?"

"Why, haven't you heard the news?"

"No," he answered steadily. "I just got up."

"Your claim was robbed. Three men overcame the watchman at midnight and cleaned the place."

His simulation of excited astonishment was perfect, and he raised a shower of questions upon her. She noted with approval that he did not look her in the eye, however. He was not an accomplished liar. Now, McNamara had a countenance of iron. Unconsciously she made comparison, and the young man at her side did not lose thereby.

"Yes, I saw it all," she concluded, after recounting the details. "The men wanted to bind me so that I could not give the alarm, but his chivalry prevented. He was a most gallant darky."

"What did you do when they left?"

"Why, I kept my word and waited until they were out of sight; then I roused the camp and set Mr. McNamara and his men right after them down the gulch."

"Down the gulch!" spoke Glenister, off his guard.

"Yes, of course. Did you think they went upstream?" She was looking squarely at him now, and he dropped his eyes. "No," the posse started in that direction, but I put them right." There was an odd light in her glance, and he felt the blood drumming in his ears.

She sent them downstream! So that was why there had been no pursuit! Then she must suspect—she must "now everything! Glenister was stunned. Again his love for the girl surged tumultuously within him and demanded expression. But Miss Chester, no longer off her guard, saw that she had the situation in hand, and already started to return to the hotel. "I saw the men detective," she told Lin before they separated "and I could identify them all."

At his own house Glenister found Dextry removing the stains of the night's adventure.

"Miss Chester recognized us last night," he announced.

"How do you know?"

"She told me so just now, and what's more she sent McNamara and his crowd down the creek instead of up. That's why we got away so easily."

"Well, well, ain't she a brick? She's even with me now. By the way, I wonder how much we cleaned up, anyhow—let's weigh it." Going to the bed, Dextry turned back the blankets, exposing four moosehide sacks, wet and heavy, where he had thrown them.

"There must have been $20,000 with what I gave Wheaton," said Glenister.

At that moment, without warning, the door was flung open, and as the young man jerked the blankets into place he whirled, snatched the six shooter that Dextry had discarded and covered the entrance.

"Don't shoot, boy!" cried the newcomer, breathlessly. "My, but you're nervous!"

Glenister dropped his gun. It was Cherry Malotte, and from her heaving breast and the flying colors in her cheeks the men saw she had been running. She did not give them time to question, but closed and locked the door while the words came tumbling from her:

"They're on to you, boys—you'd better duck out quick. They're on their way up here now."

"What!"

"Who?"

"Quick! I heard McNamara and Voorhees, the scoundrels, talking. Somebody has spotted you for the holdups. They're on their way now, I tell you. I sneaked out by the back way and came here through the mud. Say, but I'm a sight!" She stamped her trimly booted feet and flirted her skirt.

"I don't savvy what you mean," said Dextry, shaving at his partner warningly. "We ain't done nothin'."

"Well, it's all right then. I took a long chance in not could make a getaway if I got wounded; because they've got warrants for you for that sluice robbery last night. Here they are now." She darted to the window, the men peering over her shoulder. Coming up the narrow walk they saw Voorhees, McNamara and three others.

The house stood somewhat isolated and well back on the tundra, so that any one approaching it by the plank trail had an uncontested view of the premises. Escape was impossible, for the back door led out into the ankle deep puddles of the open prairie, and it was now apparent that a sixth man had made a circuit and was approaching from the rear.

"My God! They'll search the place," said Dextry, and the men looked grimly in each other's faces.

Then in a flash Glenister stripped back the blankets and seized the "poke," leaping into the bark room. In another instant he returned with them and raced desperately the candid lightness of the little room that they lived and slept in. Nothing could be hidden; it was folly to think of it. There was a loft overhead, he remembered hopefully, then realized that the pursuers would search there first of all.

"I told you he was a hard fighter," said Dextry as the quick footsteps grew louder. "He ain't no fool, neither. 'Stead of our bein' caught in the mountains, I reckon we'll shoot it out here. We should have cached that gold somewhere."

He spun the cylinder of his blackened Colt, while his face grew hard and square-like.

Meanwhile Cherry Malotte watched the hunted look in Glenister's face grow feltier and then stiffen into the stubbornness of a man at bay. The posse was at the door now, knocking. The three inside stood right and straddled. Then Glenister tossed his burden on the bed.

"Go into the back room, Cherry; there's going to be trouble."

"Who's there?" inquired Dextry through the door, to gain time. Suddenly, without a word, the girl glided to the hot blast heater, now cold and empty, which stood in a corner of the room. These stoves, used widely in the north, are vertical iron cylinders into which coal is poured from above. She lifted the lid and peered in to find it a quarter full of dead ashes, then turned with shining eyes and parted lips to Glenister. He caught the hint, and in an instant the four sacks were dropped softly into the feathery bottom and the ashes raked over. The daring maneuver was almost as quick as the flash of woman's wit that prompted it and was carried through while the answer to Dextry's question was still unspoken.

Then Glenister opened the door carelessly and admitted the crowd of men.

"We've got a search warrant to look through your house," said Voorhees.

"What are you looking for?"

"Gold dust from Anvil creek."

"All right—search away."

They rapidly scoured the premises, covering every inch, paying no heed to the girl, who watched them with indifferent eyes, nor to the old man, who glared at their every movement. Glenister was carelessly sarcastic, although his head back in time to see her dash upon Dextry.

"Don't! Don't!" She cried her appeal to the old man. "Keep cool. You'll be sorry, Dex—they're almost through."

The officer had not seen any movement on Dextry's part, but doubtless her quick eye had detected signs of violence. McNamara emerged, glowering, from the back room at that moment.

"Let them hunt," the girl was saying, while Dextry stared dazedly over her head. "They won't find anything. Keep cool and don't act rash."

Voorhees' duties sat uncomfortably upon him at the best, and, looking at the smoldering eyes of the two men, he became averse to further search in a powdery household whose members itched to shoot him in the back.

"It isn't here," he reported, but the politician only scowled, then spoke for the first time directly to the partners:

"I've got warrants for both of you, and I'm tempted to take you in, but I won't. I'm not through yet—not by any means. I'll get you—get you both." He turned out of the door, followed by the marshal, who called off his guards, and the group filed back along the walk.

"Say, you're a jewel, Cherry. You've saved us twice. You caught Voorhees just in time. My heart hit my palate when he looked into that sluice, but the next instant I wanted to laugh at Dextry's expression."

Impulsively Glenister laid his hands upon her shoulders. At his look and touch her throat swelled, her lips blossom heaved and the silken lids fluttered until she seemed choked by a very flood of sweet womanliness. She blushed like a little maid and laughed a timid, broken laugh. Then, pulling herself together, the merry careless tone came into her voice, and her cheeks grew red and cheap.

"You wouldn't trust me at first, eh? Some day you'll find that your old friends are the best after all."

And as she left them she added mockingly:

"Say, you're a pair of 'shine' desperadoes. You need a governess."

CHAPTER XI.

A RAW, gray day, with a driving drizzle from seaward and a leaden rack of clouds drifting low, matched the sullen, fitful mood of Glenister.

During the last month he had chafed and fretted like an animal in leash for word of Wheaton. This uncertainty, this impotent waiting with folded hands, was maddening to one of his spirit. He could apply himself to no fixed duty, for the sense of his wrong preyed on him fiercely, and he found himself banishing the vicinity of the Midas, gazing at it from afar, grouping hungrily for such scraps of news as chanced to reach him. McNamara allowed access to none but his minions, so the partners knew but vaguely of what happened on their property, even though, under favor of the law, it was being worked for their protection.

So when regarding a speedy hearing of the case were allowed, and the collusion between Judge Stillman and the receiver had become so generally recognized that there were uneasy mutterings and threats in many quarters. Yet, although the depredations had by now virtually absorbed all the richest properties in the district and worked them through his hirelings, the people of Nome, as a whole, did not grasp the full turpitude of the scheme nor the partners' perfect working.

Strange to say, Dextry, the fire eater, had assumed a spiritual patience quite foreign to his peppery disposition and Big Bill Wheaton was aboard with a writ or a subpoena or an alibi or whatever was necessary to put the "kibosh" on McNamara's so public excitement grew. McNamara boarded his gold in the Alaska bank, and it was taken for granted that there would be the scene of the struggle. No one supposed for an instant that the usurper would part with the treasure peaceably.

On the third morning the ship lay abreast of the town again, and a lifeboat was seen to make off from her, whereupon the idle population streamed toward the beach.

"She'll take it to the surf all right, but then watch out."

"We'd better make ready to haul 'em out," said another. "It's mighty dangerous." And, sure enough, as the skiff came rushing in through the breakers she was caught.

"Yes; all that's necessary is to file the documents, then serve the judge and McNamara. You'll be back on Anvil creek tomorrow."

Having placed their documents on record at the courthouse, the two men continued to McNamara's office. He met them with courtesy.

"Well, you had a narrow escape this morning, Mr. Wheaton. You had! What can I do for you?"

Ben lawyer briefly outlined his position and stated in conclusion:

Jubilee Services at Newburgh

reach $600.00. This is most gratifying to the officials of the church.

The chief credit for the eminent success that has attended this celebration from its inception is due to the pastor, Rev. Mr. Sexsmith has been an indefatigable worker and exercised rare good judgment in the booking out of the details. With him a committee of four was associated, and among these Rev. J. H. Chant was an able assistant. He has always been in the affairs of the church here. He worked with a seat at the right hand of the chairman on Monday evening. Mention ought also to be made of the excellent service of the Epworth League choral committee, under the chairmanship of Miss Aleta Scriver. At all the services there was a profusion of beautiful plants, which added much to the beauty of the occasion.

The souvenir programmes, containing also a historical sketch of the church, and cuts of those connected with the Jubilee, were largely bought by many and will prove in the years to come a very valuable memento. A few of these are left and may be had from Rev. Mr. Sexsmith.

At the service on Sunday morning a few were present who had attended the dedication of the church. Among these were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Collins, of Fredericksburgh. Mr. Collins was very deeply interested in the event. It was he who drew all the sand for the building of the church fifty years ago. Mrs. Albert Allen, of Marlbank, and Mrs. Isaac Fraser, of Ernestown, were two others of that number. The latter was attending the Academy at that early time.

ARDEN

The Temperance meeting passed off very nicely, and local option is now the talk of the day, and no doubt the strangers coming in town would think we needed local option or a look over. Mr. and Mrs. Geddes are spending a few days visiting friends in Kingston.—Mr. and Mrs. J. Post left on Tuesday for a trip to Detroit and other points west.—A number from here attended the funeral of Johnnie Shandreau, who died on Monday, the 19th inst., and was buried on Thursday, at the Clark cemetry. He leaves besides a widow, three small children. Johnnie, though a cripple and a great sufferer, was a very industrious fellow, always striving in every way possible to keep his family comfortable. The family have the sympathy of the community.—Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Loyst have returned, after visiting friends at Newburgh, Tamworth and Marlbank.—Messrs. P. A. Derbor and Mr. Birrell made a trip north last week.—Mrs. Minor Williams expects to leave on Tuesday next to join her husband at Webwood, Ont.—Misses Hughes Friday and Madge Reesor took tea on Tuesday evening with Mrs. Will Derbor, at Edgewater Cottage.—Mr. Ed. Barker has moved in the house lately occupied by W. W. Purdy.—Fires during the summer in this vicinity, burning fences and a number of stacks of marsh hay. There will be no huckleberries next year, nearly every place where there was any being burned over.

TAMWORTH

LENNOX AND ADDINGTON TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Lennox and Addington Teachers' Convention was held at the Collegiate Institute, Napanee, Thursday, Friday, the 15th and 16th. The meeting was one of the most successful held in Napanee. Mr. Anderson, Fleet Vet. at Salmon, and Mr. Smith, Native Indian, were the objects of much interest at the meeting.

The Kingston Whig, in an article on the address of Dr. Seaman, of speech, Education and Synthetic and Their Values," says: "It was received and listened with close attention. At the evening meeting, held in the Town Hall, Dr. Seaman gave a stenographic address on Right Living," which was full of wisdom."

Inspector Nesbitt's address on "Some Matter of Environment on Education" was of a rousing character, and will not, we believe, have been in vain.

DID YOU EVER FIGURE THE COST of a single day's baking—the material, fuel, time and labour—and consider that it is all wasted if the baking is a failure?

Results are usually satisfactory or otherwise according to the flour you use. Is it economy, then, to use a flour of uncertain quality when a few cents more will buy a flour that you can depend upon to produce light, crisp and wholesome bread or pastry?

Royal Household flour does not vary in quality—does not disappoint. It is made from selected hard wheat, milled by a most modern process which guarantees absolute purity. And purity in flour is a matter of the very greatest importance.

WORK WITHOUT WORRY.

A good deal is heard nowadays about nervousness and death some times resulting from the collapse due to nerves and worry. A neurologist of large experience has advanced a novel theory about nervous collapse, based upon a case in his own practice. He insists that a wealthy business man stricken by nervous prostration from a nervous breakdown. He was ordered to go to Europe and rest, but it did him no good. He was at his wits' end and dissatisfied, when he was ordered to do nothing that would tire him. He was instructed that rest was his only salvation. He rested week after week and month after month and all to no purpose. At last he consulted his physician, who believed in doing something. After studying the case he decided that his patient was not in the least fatigued. He simply did not have enough to do. He also strongly advised him to go to work and quit worrying. The patient did so and was cured.

This leads someone to remind us that the truth of the old axiom that work is the panacea for all evils is thus once again proved. Cases of over-work are often reported. Are usually cases of over-worry. Care may even kill the cat which has nine lives to man—one, but hard work without worry never killed any one. Work with worry may produce nervous collapse and often leads to suicide, but good honest hard work with an contentment or strain, is the best of remedies to guard against nervous breakdowns.

It would be an excellent remedy in many cases, if society women, and all men were cut by the necessity of business, late hours, impudent cabmen and worries of social functions and whatnot, instead of going to bed it would make the broom and dust pan and put in several hours of hard work in the house. It would be excellent to find how many of the nervous prostrations of society women would be cured by such treatment.

SAYS IT IS A WONDERFUL HEALER AND DOES MORE THAN IS CLAIMED FOR IT.

The Pavilion,
Goldfields, B.C.

To the Zam Buk Co.,

Gentlemen—After a very fair trial I have proved Zam-Buk eminent ly satisfactory. In my case it cured a skin rash of five years standing which no doctor had been able to do. Zam-Buk is purely herbal. It soothes and heals cuts, sores, ulcers, eruptions, boils, eczema, chafing sores, etc. In the household it is the handiest possible remedy for burns, scalds, children's injuries. It instantly relieves any wound to which it is applied; prevents festering, inflammation or blood poisoning. It cures piles, varicose ulcers, and fistula. All druggists and stores sell at 50 cents a box, or from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, 6 boxes for $2.50.

HELPFUL, ADVICE

You won't tell your family doctor the whole story about your private illness—you are too modest. You need not be afraid to tell Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., the things you could not explain to the doctor. Your letter will be held in the strictest confidence. From her vast correspondence with sick women during the past thirty years she may have gained the very knowledge that will help your case. Such letters as the following, from grateful women, establish beyond a doubt the power of to conquer all female diseases.

Mrs. Frank Ensley, Lindsay, Ontario, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"When I wrote to you some time ago, I was a very sick woman suffering from female troubles. I had inflammation of the feminine organs and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I purchased a bottle of it. I felt like a new woman. I have since recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all women troubled with female troubles."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

LIKE THORNS IN THE FLESH

Are the Sharp Twinges and Tortures of Rheumatism Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a Certain Cure.

The sure and the torture of rheumatism are not due to cold, damp weather as many people suppose. Rheumatism comes from poisons in the blood. The joints may be stiffened by cold weather, but the real cause is there. There is only one way to cure rheumatism. It must be treated through the blood. All the liniments and rubbing and so-called electrical treatment in the world will not cure rheumatism. The acid that causes the disease must be driven out of the blood and the blood enriched and purified. It is because Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich blood that they have cured thousands of cases of rheumatism after all other treatment had failed. A good proof of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do even in the most severe cases of rheumatism, is the case of Mr. David Carroll, well known barrister, dealer of Pictou, N. S. Mr. Carroll tells his own case below. I have been a great sufferer from rheumatism and have tried many remedies in the hope that some other medicine would be found that would relieve me, but without success. I gladly avail myself of the opportunity of telling the world what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me. I had been confined to my bed for months and almost unable to walk, and at times I was unable to move in bed. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and although I did not put much confidence in them, as I had been disappointed in so many other remedies, I thought I would try them. Before I had used the contents of the first box I found relief coming, and by the time I had used the contents of the second box I was able to walk around the house with a stick. When I had taken three boxes I was able to walk to the village, and could do my shopping. I have taken altogether nine boxes and am now a well man. I have since recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to many friends, and will always be glad to do so, as I feel sure they will cure any case of rheumatism. I am now attending to my business, which I was unable to do for months before I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mr. Carroll is well known throughout Pictou County, and his statement can be relied upon. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail, postpaid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DID YOU EVER FIGURE THE COST of a single day's baking—the material, fuel, time and labour—and consider that it is all wasted if the baking is a failure?

Results are usually satisfactory or otherwise according to the flour you use. Is it economy, then, to use a flour of uncertain quality when a few cents more will buy a flour that you can depend upon to produce light, criso and wholesome bread or pastry?

Royal Household flour does not vary in quality—does not disappoint. It is made from selected hard wheat, milled by a most modern process which guarantees absolute purity. And purity in flour is a matter of the very greatest importance.

The man who cures his work and sits down and writes for fear that something will happen, practically has his experiences fully realized.

WORK WITHOUT WORRY.

A good deal is heard nowadays about nervousness and death sometimes resulting from the collapse due to nerves "all gone." A neurologist of large repute has advanced a novel theory about nervous collapse, based upon a case in his own practice. He relates that a wealthy business man consulted his physician for relief from a nervous breakdown. He was ordered to go to Europe and rest, but it did him no good. He was sent to cures and sanitariums, where he was rendered to the nothing that would cure him. He was informed that not one in fifty suffering in the world took after week and month after month, and all to no purpose. At last he consulted his physician, who believed in doing something else studying the case he decided that his patient was not in the past fattened. He simply did not rest enough to do. He accordingly advised him to go to work and quit worrying. The patient did so and was cured.

This leads someone to remind us that the fruit of the old axiom that work is the panacea for all evils is thus once again proved. Overwork is so often reported. Cases usually cases of overworry. Care may even kill the cat which has nine lives to man—one, but hard work without worry never killed any one. Work with worry may produce nervous collapse and often leads to suicide, but good honest hard work with an excitement of strain, the best of remedies to guard against nervous breakdowns.

It would be an excellent remedy in many cases, also, if society women, old and worn out by the incessant excitement, late hours, imprudent eating and worries of social functions and neighbors, instead of going to the country, would take the lessons and hoe and put in several hours each day in the garden. They would be surprised to find how quickly their nerves would get right and how much pleasure they would get out of life.

HELPFUL ADVICE

You won't tell your family doctor the whole story about your private illness—you are too modest. You need not be afraid to tell Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., the things you could not explain to the doctor. Your letter will be held in the strictest confidence. From her vast correspondence with sick women during the past thirty years she may have gained the very knowledge that will help your case. Such letters as the following, from grateful women, establish beyond a doubt the power of to conquer all female diseases.

Mrs. Frank Ensley, Lindsay, Ontario, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"When I wrote to you some time ago, I was a very sick woman suffering from female troubles. I had inflammation of the feminine organs and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do.

"A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After using three bottle of it, I feel like a new woman.

"I most heartily recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all women suffering from female troubles."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored thousands of suffering women to health who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, faintness, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration.

CAMDEN EAST.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Church of St. Anthony, on Wednesday morning, Oct. 21st. The contracting parties were Miss Mary Bridgeth, Hitch, one of Camden East's popular young ladies who was joined in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Charles Hopkins, a prosperous young farmer residing west of Centreville. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. Father Murphy in the presence of the immediate friends and relatives. The bride was attired in a pretty gown of white Brussels net over white taffeta silk and was assisted by Miss Annie Bradshaw, sister of the groom, who was attired in a pretty suit of grey cloth trimmed with white silk blouse. Similar function was subsequently performed in Mr. Jere Hopkins' hotel at the bride's, the bridal party entered the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Mrs. W. H. Dafoe of Newburgh. After the ceremony the bridal party returned to the home of the bride's father where a reception was held, after which the happy couple set out on the 5 o'clock train amid showers of rice for Toronto and other points. Many costly and useful presents were showered upon the bride and groom by friends and relatives.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod Liver Oil is the means of life and enjoyment of life to thousands: men, women and children.

When appetite fails, it restores it. When food is a burden, it lifts the burden.

When you lose flesh, it brings the plumpness of health.

When work is hard and duty is heavy, it makes life bright.

It is the thin edge of the wedge: the thick end is food. But what is the use of food when you hate it and can't digest it?

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the food that makes you forget your stomach.

LETTER FROM FRED. MEMBERY

Adolphustown, Oct. 21st, 1909.

Dear Editor—Time, some of the philosophers of the world moves exceedingly rapidly, as much so as does our planet, which has a trail of over one thousand miles an hour and every revolution it moves it hurls thousands of human beings from its surface, never again to return, and which calls more frequently to the old and venerable, especially Mr. James Russell, who has a fine new home and newly painted.

I saw Messrs. Armitage, Bowers, Brooks, Grimond and several others, and all their crops looked fine and nearly ready to harvest.

There is going to be a very big block-out of grain this year, as the big fall rains must have not been working—as hard as they should, and the settlers will put in more grain than can be drawn out in any reasonable time. But the G. T. R. will not shake their railroads. The Great Northern, which Jas. Hill built from the Canadian Pacific, and the Canadian Northern Railways, and they have been busy with all their might, and the farmers views the C. P. R. with their grain. Talked to the C. N. R. men and they get ten cents per bushel more for it.

Now election will soon be on, all I have had which every party will be in the fight, and the fireworks will be set off. Sir Wilfrid Laurier will show the fireworks and in the further west who can one behind, and then either peaceable or fight and northern people do not know the requirements of this western country.

Now I must conclude as I hate to read "taken up too much space on a so valuable paper." Wishing you success I remain

LETTER FROM NINGA, MAN.

Ninga, Man., Oct. 21th, 1909.

To the Editor of the Beaver:—

Enclosed please find $1.00 for the renewal of the Napanee Beaver.

There are a few readers of The Beaver taking me to write to The Beaver who have not written for some time and I promised at this season of Manitoba, but we had the first snow on the 15th and the doctors were very good this year where everybody from epidemic to the grippe, so people are getting about and the time is good for correspondence, although there is not much about to be carried. I landed three cars of settlers effects and had one of my own cars, and one-half cord, one load and two other cars for family, effects, about 25 head of livestock and all the effects of three men who only came to settle. I always find the cars moved quickly for them, and I cannot afford to flow from this to my cattle, a fault, and I know that I have talked something over sixteen thousand bushels of wheat this year, and will sell a thousand dollars worth of this year's wheat at the prize remains where it is, but I think it will go higher. I am going to stay (Manitoba) until after New Years.

Mr. Harry Osborne, an old Lennox man raised seven thousand bushels of grain this year.

Just before harvest I took a trip to Melita and there met some of my old acquaintances, whom I had not seen for seven years, and was pleased to find them all in a prosperous condition, making great improvements in their homes and surroundings, especially Mr. James Russell, who has a fine new house and newly painted.

I saw Messrs. Armitage, Bowers, Brooks, Grimond and several others, and all their crops looked fine and nearly ready to harvest.

Enclosed please find $1 00 for the renewal of the Napanee Beaver.

There are a few readers of The Beaver among the settlers in the Beaver also think our crops are all frosted and destroyed in this section of Manitoba, but such is not the case. Although in this district we were not good this year, about 25 bushels to the acre being the average, but in other parts of Manitoba and the Territories they have had a splendid crop. I myself had the pleasure of threshing this year and will tell you a thousand dollars worth of this year's wheat is the best

"What's that?" they cried.

"I guess into the bank just now for an away on some quirta sandies. The assayer is busy, and I walk back into his room, and while I'm there in trots McNamara in a hurry. He don't see me, as I'm inside the private office, and I overhear him tell them to get his dust out of the vault quick."

"We've got to stop that," said Glenister. "If he takes ours, he'll take the Swedes', too. Stillman's up in the Pioneer company and tell them about it. If he gets that gold out of there, nobody knows what'll become of it. Come on, Bill."

He snatched his hat and ran out of the room, followed by the others. That the brave jointed Shipjack did his work with cheerless was evidenced by the fact that the Swedes were close upon their heels as the two entered the bank. Without a word they pushed on, something unusual, and the space within the doors filled rapidly. At the distance the clerks suspended their work, the barred doors of the safe deposit vault stood open, and the cashier was in front of the cage. Cole's at his elbow.

"What's the matter?" he cried.

"We want Alex McNamara," said Glenister.

The manager of the bank appeared, and silently spoke to him through the heavy screening.

"Is McNamara in there?"

No one had ever known Mordhouse to lie. "Yes, sir." He spoke hesitatingly, in a voice full of the slow music of Virginia. "He is in here. What of it?"

"We have been trying to move that dust of ours, and we won't stand for it. Tell him to come out and not hide in there like a dog."

At these words the politician appeared beside the cashier, and the two conversed softly an instant, while the impatience of the crowd grew to anger. Some one cried:

"Let's go in and drag him out," and the rumble at this was not pleasant. Mordhouse raised his hand.

"Gentlemen, Mr. McNamara says he doesn't intend to take any of the gold himself."

"Then he's taken it already."

"No, he hasn't."

The prisoner's course had been quickly chosen at the interruption. It was not wise to appear there too long. Although he had planned to get the money into his own possession, he now thought it best to leave it where for the present. He could come back at any time when they were off guard and get it. Through the door against which he stood he could see, weighed, sacked, sealed and ready to move out of the vaulted room. Virginian whose confidence he had tried so fruitlessly to gain.

As McNamara looked into the angry eyes of the men loved men beyond the grating he felt that the game was growing worse, and his blood tingled at the thought. He had not planned on a resistance so strong and swift, but he would meet it. He knew that they hungered for his destruction and that Glenister was their leader. He saw further that the mob's hatred now stared at him openly for the first time. He knew that lack of it was some thing more than fear of the gold metal over which they wrangled, and then a thought came to him.

"Some of your men, eh, Glenister?" he mocked. "Were you afraid to come alone, or did you wait till you saw me with a lady?"

At the same instant he opened a door behind him, revealing Helen Chester. "You'd better not walk out with me, Miss Chester. Both sides might—well, you're safer here, you know. You'll pardon me for leaving you." He hoped he could incite the young man to some rash act or word in the presence of the girl and counted on the suspicion and hesitation of his own people during the mob single handed, one against fifty.

"Come out," said his enemy hoarsely, upon whom the insult and the sight of the girl in the receiver's company had acted powerfully.

"Of course I'll come out, but I don't want this young lady to suffer any violence from your friends," said McNamara. "I am not armed, but I have the right to leave here unmolested—the right of an American citizen." With that he raised his arms above his head and, out of my way!" he cried. Mordhouse opened the gate, and McNamara strode through the mob.

It is a peculiar thing that, although under fury of passion, a man may fire even upon the back of a defenseless foe, yet no one can offer violence to a man whose arms are raised on high and in whose gesture is the lewd light of fearlessness. Moreover, it is easier to face a crowd than a single adversary.

"Out of my way!" he cried.

McNamara had seen this psychological trick tried before and now took advantage of it to walk through the press slowly, eye to eye. He did it theatrically, for the benefit of the girl, and, as he foresaw, the men fell away before him—all but Silvester, who blocked him, gun in hand. It was plain that the persuaded miner was beside himself with passion. McNamara came within an arm's length before pausing. Then he stopped, and the two stared malignantly at each other, while the girl behind the railing heard her heart pounding in the stillness. Glenister raised his hand uncertainly, then let it fall. He shook his head and stepped aside, so that the other brushed past and out into the street.

Wheaton addressed the banker:

"Mr. Mordhouse, we've got orders and writs of one kind or another from the circuit court of appeals at Tylton directing that this money be turned over to us." He shoved the papers toward the other. "We're not in a mood to trifle. That gold belongs to us, and we want it."

Mordhouse looked carefully at the papers.

"I can't help you," he said. "These documents are not directed to me. They're bound to Mr. McNamara and Judge Stillman. If the circuit court of appeals commands me to deliver it to you, I'll do it, but otherwise I'll have to keep this dust here till it's drawn out by order of the court that gave it to me. That's the way it was put in here, and that's the way it'll be taken out."

"We want it now."

"Well, I can't let my sympathies influence me."

"Then we'll take it out anyway," cried Glenister. "We've had the worst of it everywhere else, and we're sick of it. Come on, men!"

"Stand back, all 'o' you!" cried Morehouse. "Don't lay a hand on that gate. Boys, pick your men."

He called this last to his clerks, at the same instant whipping from behind the counter a carbine, which he cocked. The assayer brought into view a shotgun, while the cashier and clerks armed themselves. It was evident that the deposits of the Alaska bank were abundantly safeguarded.

"I don't aim to have any trouble with you-all," continued the southerner, "but that money stays here till it's drawn out right."

The crowd paused at this show of resistance, but Glenister rallied at them.

"Come on! Come on! What's the matter with you?" And from the light in his eye it was evident that he would not be balked.

Helen felt that a crisis was come and braced herself. These men were in deadly earnest—the white haired banker, his pale helpers and those six jaws and frowning faces and yellow haired Scandinavians in whose blue eyes danced the flame of battle. These had been baffled at every turn, goaded by repeated failure, and now stood shoulder to shoulder in their resistance to a cruel law. Suddenly Helen heard a command from the street and the quick tramp of men, while over the heads before her she saw the glint of rifle barrels. A file of soldiers with fixed bayonets thrust themselves roughly through the crowd at the entrance.

"Clear the room!" commanded the officer.

"What does this mean?" shouted Wheaton.

"It means that Judge Stillman has called upon the military to guard this gold, that's all. Come, now, move quick!" The men hesitated, then sullenly obeyed, for resistance to the bite of Uncle Sam comes only at the cost of much consideration.

"They're robbing us with our own soldiers," said Wheaton when they were outside.

"Aye," said Glenister darkly. "We have tried the law, but they're forcing us back to first principles. There's going to be murder here."

CHAPTER XII.

GLENISTER had said that the judge would not dare to disobey the mandates of the circuit court of appeals, but he was wrong. Application was made for orders directing the enforcement of the writs, steps which would have restored possession of the Midas to its owners as well as possession of the treasure in bank, but Stillman refused to grant them.

Wheaton called a meeting of the Swedes and their attorneys, advising a junction of forces. Dextry, who had returned from the mountains, was present. When they had finished their session, he said:

"It seems like I can always fight better when I know what the other fellow's game is. I'm going to spy on that outfit."

"We've had detectives at work for weeks," said the lawyer for the Scandinavians, "but they can't find out anything we don't know already."

Dextry said no more, but that night found him busied in the building adjoining the one wherein McNamara had his office. He had rented a bag room on the top floor, and with the help of his partner sawed through the ceiling into the loft and found his way thence to the roof through a hatchway. Fortunately, there was but little space between the two buildings, and furthermore each boasted the square fronts common in mining camps, which projected high enough to prevent observation from across the way. Thus he was enabled, without discovery, to gain the roof adjoining and to cut through into the loft. He crept cautiously in through the opening and sat upon a floor of loose boards on the lower side, then lit a candle and locating McNamara's office cut a porthole so that by lying flat on the timbers he could observe a considerable portion of the room beneath. Here early the following morning he camped with the patience of an Indian, emerging in the still of that night stiff, hungry and abnormally cross. Meanwhile there had been another meeting of the mine owners, and it had been decided to send Wheaton, properly armed with affidavits and transcripts of certain court records, back to San Francisco on the return trip of the Santa Maria, which had arrived in port. He was to institute proceedings for contempt of court, and if it was found that by extraordinary effort he could gain quick action.

It's daylight Dextry returned to his post, and it was midnight before he crawled from his hiding place to rouse the lawyer and Glenister.

"They have had a spy on you all day, Wheaton," he began, "and they know you're going out of the States. You'll be arrested tomorrow morning before breakfast."

"Arrested! What for?"

"I don't just remember what the crime is; bigamy, or mayhem, or at number of treason, or something. Anyway, they'll get you in jail, and that's all they want. They think you're the only lawyer that's wise enough to cause trouble and the only one they can't bribe."

"Lord! What'll I do? They'll watch every lighter that leaves the beach, and if they don't catch me that way they'll search the ship."

THE GOVERNMENT AND ZAM-BUK

Survey Cut From Fort William Takes This Wonderful Balm.

Zam-Buk, the famous household balm is now adopted as The Dominion Boating party in surveying various parts of the Dominion lands.

Mr. Henry Hall starting from Fort William says:—Having proved how beneficial Zam-Buk is in cases of cuts, skin injuries and eczema, I determined to keep a supply handy. Being engaged to go on a survey, I thought it would be a most useful thing to take along. I obtained a supply in Fort William, and very well it was I did so. A man can that pretty nearly every day it was called into requisition by some or other of the party for cuts, bruises, burns, or some injury or other. It is wonderful how quickly Zam-Buk takes the soreness out of cuts, bruises and injuries, and on our survey it earned golden opinions from all who had occasion to try it. I have found it very fine for skin diseases, and I can strongly recommend it as a household balm."

Mr. Geo. Scott, one of the leading Government analysts says:—"I have no hesitation in certifying the entire purity of Zam-Buk which in my opinion is excellently adapted for skin injuries and diseases. Zam-Buk cures cuts, scalds, burns, bruises, eczema, scalp sores, ringworm, ulcers, abscesses, chapped hands, cold sores, blood poisoning, chronic ulcerations, etc. As an embrocation it relieves rheumatism, neuralgia, and sciatica. All Druggists and Stores sell at 50 cents a box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, 3 boxes for $1.25. Send 1 cent stamp for dainty sample box.

"I've thought it all out," said the old man, to whom obstruction acted as a stimulant.

"Yes; but how?"

"Leave it to me. Get your things together and be ready to duck in two hours."

"I tell you they'll search the Santa Maria from stem to stern," protested the lawyer, but Dextry had gone.

"Better do as he says. His schemes are good ones," commanded Glenister, and accordingly the lawyer made preparation.

In the meantime the old prospector had begun at the end of Front street to make a systematic search of the gambling houses. Although it was very late, they were running noisily, and at last he found the man he wanted playing black jack, the smell of tar in his clothes, the lilt of the sea in his boisterous laughter. Dextry drew him aside.

"Mac, there's only two things about you that's any good—your daring and your seamanship. Otherwise you're a disreputable, drunken insect."

The sailor grinned.

"What is it you want now? If it's concerning money or business or the growed up side of life, run along and don't disturb the cutcouals of a sailorman. If it's a fight, lemme get my hat."

"I want you to wake up your fireman and have steam on the tug in an hour, then wait for me below the bridge. You're chartered for twenty-four hours, and, remember, not a word."

"I'm on." Compared to me the spunks of Egypt is as talkative as a phonograph."

The old man turned his steps to the Northern theater. The performance was still in progress, and he located the man he was hunting without difficulty.

Ascending the stairs, he knocked at the door of one of the boxes and called for Captain Stedman.

"I'm glad I found you, cap," said he. "It saved me a trip out to your ship in the dark."

"What's the matter?"

Dextry drew him to an isolated corner. "Mr. Jones, my partner want to send a man to the States with you."

"All right."

"Well—here's the point," hesitated the miner, who relished at asking favors. "[illegible] the sharps and the McNamara outfit is trying to put the steel on him."

"I don't understand."

"Why, they've sworn out a warrant an' aim to guard the shore tomorrow. We want you to—"

"Mr. Dextry, I'm not looking for trouble. I got enough in my own business."

"But, see here—I saved the other, we've got a friend like to be can make a passion to the big regal smoke in Frisco. We've been pardoned with a bum judge. They've got us into a corner an' over the ropes."

"I'm sorry I can't help you, Dextry, but I got mixed up in one of your scrapes and that's plenty."

"This ain't no shoo-away. There's no danger to you," began Dextry, but the officer interrupted him.

"There's no need of arguing. I won't do it."

"Oh, you won't, eh?" said the old man, his temper to boil. "Well, you listen to me for a minute. Everybody in camp knows that me an' the kid is on the square an' that we've gettin' the bunk passed to us. Now, this lawyer party must get away tonight or these guys will hitch the horses to him on some phony charge so he can't get to the upper court. It'll be him for the hoosegow for sure. He's goin' to the States, though, an' he's goin' in your wagon! I'm talk. If you want to know it you don't have to take him, I'll go to the health inspector [illegible] friend of mine an' I'll put a stamp in your log-book. I don't want to do that; it ain't my regular graft to be sneaky but this bet goes through. So she lays. I never bothered up a secret before. No sir. I am the human hunnin' case watch, an' I won't open my face unless you prods me, but if I should, you'll see that it's time for you to hunt a new job. Now, here's my scheme." He outlined his objections to the sailor, who had fallen silent during the warning. When he had done, Stedman said:

"I never had a man talk to me like that before, sir, never. You've taken advantage of me and under the circumstances I can't refuse. I'll do this thing but in case of your threat, but because I heard a bum judge over the Midas and because I can't help admiring your blamed insolence." He went back into his still.

Dextry returned to Wheaton's office. As he neared it he passed a lounging figure in an adjacent doorway.

"The place is watched," he announced as he entered. "Have you got a watch out? Good! Leave your lights burning and we'll go out that way." They slipped quietly into an inky, forlorn passageway which led into the Second street. Floundering through alleys and over garbage heaps, by circuitous routes they reached the dock, where in the swift stream beneath they saw the lights from Mac's tug.

Steam was up, and when the captain and let them aboard Dextry gave him instructions, to which he nodded assent. "Well if we—I did—a man can that pretty nearly every day it was called into requisition by some or other of the party for cuts, bruises, burns, or some injury or other. enacted beneath him.

First had come the engineer, who reported his failure to thin Wheaton.

"He left his room one time last night. My man followed him and saw a light in his window until 2 o'clock this morning. At 7 o'clock we broke in, and he was gone."

"He must have got in and out again. Send deputies aboard the Santa Maria. Search her from keel to topmast, and have them watch the beach some of he'll put off in a small boat. You look over the passengers. Find me and yourself. Don't trust any of your men for that, because he may try to slip through disguised. He's liable to take up like a woman. You understand—there's only one ship in port, me, he mustn't get away."

"He won't," said Vawkes, with conviction, and the last one over said skipper's orders to try it, to put the steel on him."

"I didn't understand."

"Why, they've sworn out a warrant an' aim to guard the shore tomorrow. We want you to—"

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A FIRM'S AFFAIRS

The affairs of a firm in Oklahoma recently becoming much involved, the partnership was dissolved. The attitude of the senior member thereof may be gathered from a notice he caused to be published in a local paper. It ran as follows:

"From this day forth there is no such firm as Blank & Dash. Those that owe the firm may call on me as soon as they are ready, and those that the firm owes had better call on him as quickly as they can."

AN EYE ON THE FUTURE

Tommy's maiden aunt had called attention to some of that youth's many misdemeanors, thereby causing him to be punished. Tommy pondered a while then asked: "Papa, will little sister grow be an aunt to my children when I am a man?"

"Yes, Tommy," answered his father, much interested. "Why do you ask?"

"Cause she might as well start practice and have a home of her own, for I don't intend to have any aunts to stay around my home, making trouble for my children."

All through he said whatever the Lord saw fit to do he was willing, and at the last he said "I will soon be with my brother, Henry, who died eight years ago. He leaves a delicate wife and one daughter, 5 years old, and father, mother and three sisters to mourn. He just came from the west in the spring on account of his wife's health. He was the leader of the choir and his wife the organist, until his wife's health gave out. He was a Christian. LETTER OF CONDOLENCE

Mrs. Leah Russell,
Selby, Ont.

The members of Sub-Court Selby, No. 1809, and Comp. Court Selby, No. 812, brethren and companions of our late Bro. J. I. Russell, deceased, desire to convey to you their deepest sympathy in your sad bereavement.

It is with heartfelt sorrow we record his early demise, and regret the loss of such a true, noble and Christian brother, and good citizen. It is, however, consoling to reflect that beyond this fleeting scene, there is a world in which farewells are never spoken and all tears are wiped away.

To that happier home, the partner of your joys has been called away and your loss is his gain.

May your faith in Him who doeth all things well, sustain and comfort you.

Signed on behalf of the members of the Courts

MARY R. DENISON,
Recording Secretary.
C. N. LUCAS,
Recording Secretary.

BREWER'S MILLS.

The much needed rain has come and the farmers are busy ploughing.

The funeral of Mr. F. E. Haggerty took place on Thursday last, and was largely attended. Much sympathy is extended to the surviving family.—Prayer meetings in Pine Grove Methodist church are well attended. We hope to see still more present at these weekly services.

Parties are busily making cheese every other day, owing to the scarcity of milk.—Miss E. M. Gallagher accompanied by Miss A. M. Dillon left on Friday to spend a week at Wilton. While there they will attend the marriage of H. J. Gallagher, which takes place on Wednesday, October 28th. Election day passed off quietly.—Miss E. Bates at H. McCallum's.—Mr. G. Gallagher at Hebbert's.—Mr. F. Dillon at J. Dillon's.—Mr. J. Sweat at J. Kendall's.—Mr. J. Sweat at T. Todd's.—Mr. F. Vaghn at F. McCammon's.

SALMON POINT

The heavy rain in next month all prevented it being the farmers could very much on their fall ploughing. We are glad to hear that Mr. Wesley S. Johnston, of Chubb's Valley, is home from Kingston after spending seven weeks in the soldiers' hospital, from the effects of a stroke of pee. He is now resting with his sister, Mrs. Wood, of Chubb's Valley, and is doing much. Though he is still done for this year. A very sad accident occurred at this place on Sunday night. While Mr. D. Sexsmith and his son were driving their horse, being strange, got off the road and went in the river on near the outlet bridge, and they were all drowned, including the horse. The sympathy of the whole public of this place goes out to the bereaved friends. Mr. James E. Lamoreaux paid a flying visit to Chubb's Valley and also to Salmon Point on Tuesday last.—Mr. Miss Marjorie Wood, of Salmon Point, is spending a few weeks in Kingston at Stirling. Dr. M. Currie is out best man. He got $12 off a gun.

MOSCOW

On the evening of October 28th, 1908, a very quiet and pretty wedding was solemnized at the beautiful home of Mr. W. W. Associate when his youngest daughter, Miss Flora Belle, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Fredgar ok Allan Grant, at Sidenham. The bride was daintily attired in a becoming evening dress of chiffon muslin with cream and pink trimmings and carried a shower bouquet of white carnations and bridal roses. Rev. N. Flat-stone tied the nuptial knot. After the ceremony the guests, who were the immediate relatives of the bride and groom, sat down to a sumptuous wedding dinner. The bride will be greatly missed in all circles. As superintendent of the Sunday School she was an ardent worker, and the school made rapid progress under her skillful charge. The presents were numerous and costly. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold necklace set with pearls. After a couple of hours spent in social intercourse, the happy couple, amid showers of rice, were driven away in a Kingston cab with stately white horses. The bride looked charming in her travelling suit of striped green and black with hat to match. The many friends and relatives wish this popular young couple their heartiest congratulations and best wishes for a bon and happy voyage through life.

The anniversary services will be held in Moscow Methodist church on Sunday, Nov. 8th, 1908. Rev. G. W. McCall, Napanee, has been secured to preach both morning and evening. Morning service at 10.30 and evening service at 7.30. On the following Monday evening a Thanksgiving entertainment will be given. The famous Scottish contralto singer, Madame Annie Dow Cochrane, late of Toronto, will furnish many eloquent numbers. The Misses Paul, Napanee; Miss Pearl Nesbit, of Newburgh, and Miss Marguerite Patterson, of Moscow, will furnish other numbers, which in all will without a doubt, prove the event of the season. Come one, come all, and enjoy a first class entertainment.—Mr. J. Foster is on the sick list.—Mrs. A. Lake is spending a few weeks visiting her daughter, Mrs. R. Kingsbury, of Peterboro.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

To the Editor of The Beaver.

Sir,—I wish to thank my supporters in the recent election for their unselfish zeal and devotion which secured my success on Monday last.

I have to thank my friends in the constituency who so nobly expressed their confidence in me by returning me for the sixth time to Parliament.

As evidently my friends have not considered I have been there too long it will be my earnest endeavor to support and forward measures which will be for the well being of all the people of this country, and I appreciate the opportunity which has been given me to return to Ottawa to the support of that clean, upright and honorable gentleman Mr. R. L. Borden.

Wishing one and all great happiness and prosperity, and thanking you for the space you have allowed me.

Yours faithfully,

Napanee, Ont. 15th, 1908.

Mr. M. S. Madole,

Dear Sir,—We are perfectly satisfied with the Peninsular Hot Blast Range we purchased from you and can truthfully say as far as the principles of the stove baking and heating it gives entire satisfaction. We have used in bed another to what it used to be, for the same Range we had before. My wife thinks for a wood-eated it stands alone. I would feel free in recommending it to any person looking to buy a Range. Yours truly,

David Grieves for Absalom. II Sam. 18. Golden Text: A foolish son is a grief to his father. Prov. 17:25.

Verses 1-5—Is there any hope for mercy in the ordinary affairs of life, as well as in war, without system and the rough organization

How much of the success of this country depends upon our national leaders?

Verses 3, 4—Should a general in war, or a leader in any cause, go with or without himself in the danger line?

If a man starts out to fight for the truth, is it either right or in the interests of the truth?

Was David right in wanting to protect, even in this way, some of the fragrant light in persuading him not to do so?

Verse 5—What a right and appealing to the mind of God for David to command, through Joab, that no one hurt his wayward but beloved son?

When people sympathize with criminals and try to shield them from justice, is it a maudlin sympathy or true christian love?

Verses 6-8—Has war, upon the whole, been a blessing or a curse to mankind?

Is war ever right, except as a means or measure for obtaining peace?

Was David to be praised or blamed for this war?

Consider the horrors of this war, and compare with the unspeakable horrors of the possible wars of the future, and then ask if future wars will be tolerated by their authors as active criminals than the instruments of Abolom?

Verse 9—Was it accidental or providential for Absalom to be caught in the head in this oak tree?

Are there not accidents in the life of a true Christian?

Was it a reasonable expectation that the wicked will not, finally, bring disaster upon themselves?

Verse 10—Why did you say you saw it and report the reasoning of this man, who feared Joab's displeasure if he should refused to kill him?

As between souls and God, should we obey, or disobey, those in authority, who command what their conscience is against the will of God, as in the present case?

Should we obey God, rather than men, as at the risk of our lives?

Is it noble, or ignoble, to be a person of profit and honor as in matters of right and wrong?

Verse 11—Notwithstanding the command of the king, to the contrary, was Joab right in striking Absalom?

Was the leader in a bad cause in doing deeds, does he generally, as Joab did here in this case?

Verse 12—Was not an invisible life to have a noble ending, or a noble life to have an ignoble ending what the greatest of all matters?

Verse 15—Should a truly loyal man ever be rampressed to do what patriotic will say, by a leader who is not acting in accordance with the principles of this nation?

Refusing emoluments, as he generally does, was Joab right in accepting the one thing he obliged to accept?

Should he accept the end and a sufficient reward for?

Verses 19-23—Whether wise a priest should preach or preachers take an active part in public affairs?

In carrying important things, either good or bad, is it wise to allow any other than secrets as far it can be left the whole responsibility?

Did Ahimaaz, or any other man, have a right to run before he was sent? Was it wise for him to do so, or to persist in doing so, when told to desist?

Verse 24—Was it wise for the king to sit from most to succeed in waiting for news from the battle?

Verse 31—Why did you say, "Tidings, my lord the king: for the Lord hath avenged thee this day of all them that rose up against him?"

Verse 32—Was it wise for the king to ask about Absalom?

Lesson for Sunday: Saul Put from Kingdom. I Sam. 15:10-23. Golden Text: To obey is better than sacrifice. I Sam. 15:22.

CHANGING STYLES IN FURS

In the course of an article containing much advice on the buying of furs the November Woman's Home Companion says:

Styles in fur change as every-thing else does, and it is a highly profitable rule to buy furs that are well shapen for moderate expenditure, for that will be modish a reasonable length of time. There are no fads followed by manufacturing furriers that can be followed with reasonable degree of certainty.

As a usual thing furs come in style three years, growing gradually in favor and then gradually declining. Each year a new fashion comes in, or that there are no furs in vogue with one coming in. Furriers are always on the lookout for the latest lines however of the one coming in, being assured of a market for them, and one going out of favor, sometimes looks ahead. Furs come back into style only about as they went out, ten years and more after such a fad is definitely dead, they will be fashionable to wear.

A Danger in Cheap Furs.

Cheap fur carry with them a danger that it is well to consider. This is their tendency to moth, which they are made up and the fact that fur offers an attractive lodging place for germs. Most of them are made in Russian lines, half starved, underfed, and huddled together with all of furriers asthma. Naturally the better goods are made under sanitary conditions.

ANNUAL CONVENTIONS OF HORTICULTURAL AND VEGETABLE GROWERS' ASSOCIATIONS.

On Thursday, Nov. 12th, the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association will hold its annual convention in the City Hall, the first session starting at 9 a.m.

Both these Conventions are being held during the week of the Ontario Horticultural Exhibition when single rates are in force on all the Railways in Ontario, thus enabling delegates and all others interested in Horticultural and Vegetable Growing to be present at a minimum expense.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

Carnduff, Sask., Oct. 29th, 1908
Dear Editor,—Pleased to say to the people of Ontario and friends of Napanee I have been through the western part of Manitoba, and am now in Saskatchewan, as salesman for the E. Daly & Co. teas, travelling through Manitoba. The wheat crop is a very good average, from fifteen to thirty bushels per acre. Killarney, Man., papers stated as high as thirty-four bushels per acre. I stopped over night with Geo. Towns, Nesca, Man. His crop will be from ten to twelve thousand bushels. He was offered 90¢ per bushel on track. Mr. Towns has made considerable money. Farmers are doing well, as this year is a prosperous one. Threshing has all gained pretty well in Manitoba. Coming alowg west to Gainsboro, Sask., and am now in Carnduff. They have not much more than half through threshing here, the grain standing in stooks waiting. A very heavy rain came a week ago and nothing done since. Two or three weeks threshing yet. It has been snowing, raining and freezing cold since 24th of September, last two or three days going fine.

Must say to the people on Ontario that the west has more opportunities than the east, as the people with their fine homes and large amount of money in the banks would never make it in the east. The country at the present time is in a very prosperous condition, and I have never dealt with better people, as they pay by checks, and it is a pleasure to do business. I like my work very much, as my health has improved, never feeling better. When I get frozen out here I will return east, as the climate is different, nothing hot yet. You should come west, you don't know why you should not do as well as those who are here. They have certainly made money.

Thanking you for space.

Yours very truly,
ERNEST LOVAT.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Twenty years ago all well dressed men had their shoes made-to-measure by the local shoemaker or a good city shoemaker. How many do so now? Not one in a thousand, because they can get a better fitting and more stylish shoe ready-to-wear for the same or less money.

Twenty years ago every well dressed man had his clothes made by the custom tailor. To-day thousands of well dressed men wear nothing but ready-for-service clothes, because they see more stylish than the custom made garments, they fit as well or better, and cost from $5.00 to $15.00 less for a garment.

There is no doubt whatever but that the wholesale tailor is rounding out the custom tailor just as the wholesale shoemaker has crowded out the custom shoemaker, and the wholesale shirt maker has crowded out the custom shirt maker. Within the past few years hundreds of custom tailors have gone out of business. Some of the best known locations in wholesale shops and others have gone into the ready-to-wear business.

When you come to think it over how can it be otherwise? Wholesale tailors do an enormous business that they can afford to pay a princely salary to designers. Therefore they get salaries as high as $5,000 a year. How many custom tailors could this possibly be? You may say the man who buys the clothes must help to pay this big salary. But you remember that one of these big wholesale houses sell nearly fifty thousand suits and overcoats a year you will see that the cost of all the style on each of these garments is probably a few cents. It is the biggest ten cents worth on the market.

The designer in a wholesale tailor shop spends his whole time and energies in designing. The smaller custom tailor has a system of cutting when he is a young man and he cuts that was until he quits the business. He is also a coat maker, vest maker, trouser maker, bookkeeper, collector and salesman and knows something about the duties of each if these positions and not enough about any one of them to set the world on fire. He also does business on a credit basis and gets many orders that he never gets pay for. Somebody has to pay for these losses. He has short runs, long lengths, while the wholesale tailor buys in stays yard bolts, and runs a factory for three hundred days in a year without a hitch. Who do you think has the cheaper?

One of the most factors in the big improvement that has taken place in the wholesale tailoring trade within the past ten years is the system of tailoring by experts in every department of the business. Each man in a wholesale tailoring shop has one single thing to do—or perhaps a part of a garment, and he does that one thing from Monday morning until Saturday night, week in and week out, and he becomes marvellously proficient. Take the hanging of sleeves for instance. That is done by men who do absolutely nothing else. That is why sleeves in wholesale tailored garments' heads always put in more smoothly and more correctly than the custom tailor can do it.

Another wholesale tailors in Canada have done away entirely with cutting this class of garments as the 20th Century Brand people in Montreal. Their tailors are recognized as model shops all over America and are visited by tailors from many countries. Their make nothing but fine tailored garments for men, and in several years they have grown to be one of the largest in the land. Their garments are known and appreciated in every province of the Dominion, and their styles are respected right and left.

Graham & Vandalinde are sole agents for this celebrated firm and have on hand the complete assortment of Fall and Winter models that they have in stock. No custom tailor in this part of the country can equal them, our style, fit and good tailoring. They make fully as good, and for more than $5.00 less than you can get it.

A SOLID VOTE.

A vote of the whole Dominion of Canada to ascertain which paper we had in the new-paper line would without question result in a solid vote for the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal. At twice, yes five times its present price it would be a cheap paper. And value in fact it is just such a paper that Farmers' Sons and Daughters delight in. It costs but dollar a year, and one can't go wrong in giving it a trial. It already reaches the majority of homes in this country, and those who receive it would not be without it. 45a

The Kind You Have Always Bought

HINCH—INGOLDSBY

The bell of the R. C. church Centreville rang out merrily on the morning of October 21st announcing the marriage of Miss Nettie Ingoldsby, daughter of Camden East, and Charles, son of Michael Hinch, Centreville. The happy young couple marched up the aisle to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mrs. W. B. Dunnett, Newburgh, and were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. Father Mac-Carthy. The ceremony was witnessed by only their immediate friends and relatives after which the bridal party returned to the home of the bride's father where a dainty dejeuner was served, and the health of the bride and groom was heartily responded to. After the repast the bride changed her lovely wedding dress of embroidered lace over white duchess satin, for a dainty navy blue travelling dress, and was accompanied to the station by their many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hinch and some made of the wedding goods, also smoke donned them with rice and confetti, as they boarded the 5.10 train to spend their honeymoon in Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. Ingoldsby have the best wishes of a host of friends. Congratulations.

BLACK KNIGHT STOVE POLISH

The Spoilers.

By REX E. BEACH.

Copyright, 1905, by Rex E. Beach.

"That's right. Too weak. He hasn't got the backbone of an anglewarm. He ain't half the man that his niece is. There's a girl for you! Say, what'd we do without her, eh? She's a pippin!" Gleinister felt a sudden tightening of every muscle. What right had that man's liquor sodden lips to speak so of her?

"She's a brave little woman all right. Just look how she worked Gleinister and his foul partner. It took nerve to bring in those instructions of yours alone, and if it hadn't been for her we'd never have won like this. It makes me laugh to think of those two men standing her away in their staterooms while they slept between decks with the sheep, and her with the papers in her bosom all the time. Then, when we got ready to go to Lindoe's why, she up and told them into their teeth to mutiny if their value was worth it. That's what I call nerve—nerve and a whole lot else."

Gleinister's face, even into his cheekbones, was white. Fold of the world. He could not grasp it at once. It made him sick and dizzy, sick and for a moment he became blindly to beat back. It looked suspicion, the horror of it—the longer had escaped. He'd never had a challenge to fight, and to him the fight seemed no one pointing accusing finger, finally incapable of deceit. He had loved her, feeling that some day she would return his affection without fail. In her great, unclouded eyes he had found no forbidden place for double dealing. Now—God! it couldn't be that all the time she had known!

He had lost a part of the lawyer's speech, but peered through his observation hole again.

McNamara was at the window gazing out into the dark street, his back toward the lawyer, who lolled in the chair, babbling garrulously of the girl. Gleinister ground his teeth—a frenzy possessed him to know his anger to rip through the frail ceiling with naked hands and fall vindictively upon the two men.

"She looked good to me the first time I saw her," continued Struve. He paused, and when he spoke again a change had contorted his features. "Say, I'm crazy about her. Mac. You, too, by the eyes and likes me if I know the men—or, anyway, she wants."

"You mean that you're in love with her?" asked the man at the window without stirring his position. It he read that never indifference was in his question, although where the blind shone on his hands, right clinched behind his back, there was bloodless.

"Love her? Well, that depends—but You know how it is," he chuckled coarsely. His face was gross and beastly. "I've got the place where I want him, and I'll have her."

His mirth ended in a cough, and a curse for McNamara had silently leaped and throttled him where he sat, pinning him to the wall. Gleinister saw the man's pockets which his fingers slightly on Struve's throat and then drop his left hand to his side, hauling his victim without and helpless with his right despite the man's frantic struggles. McNamara's head was thrust forward from his shoulders, peering into the lawyer's face. Struve bore inside easily at the iron arm which was supporting him, while for endless minutes the other leaned his weight against him, his idle hand behind his back, his face braced into stone columns as he watched his victim's struggles abate.

Struve fought and wrenched while his breath caught in his throat with beard, as letting sounds, but gradually his eyes rolled farther and farther back till they stared out of his blackened visage, straight up toward the ceiling, toward the hole through which Gleinister peered. His struggles lessened, then ceased, and his tongue protruded between his teeth and still. The man's face was close to his victim's now, and Gleinister could see his face, very much changed. Finally McNamara released his hold of the watch and let the body fall to the floor. It lay there, a water bucket, and the gleaming eye of the murderer looked down upon it. Then he pulled the seated figure to a chair and watched the bottom of it for a few moments. He was not sure that he was not talking him from the dead.

Then he shuddered, twice, and turned away. He had to look at it again.

At first there was room a great deal of the dead man that sat and smiled and stared at him—a flabby face of the type of book that sat and smiled and stared at him—a flabby face of the type of book that sat and smiled and stared at him—a flabby face of the type of book

TUNING RECITAL

The audience that gathered in the Town Hall on Thursday evening, October 29th were greatly delighted with the recital in Miss Margaret Shepherd's vocal art of Toronto and Miss Charlie Hall of Napanee. Our first word of commendation should be for the programme itself. It was not too long, and each number was of the highest order. After the first selection by each of the artists the audience would not be denied, and each time was greeted with applause that called for an encore. To this request Miss Hall responded in the andante and encore piece, which she very kindly rendered in the programme. Mr. Shepherd also responded with the hackbut which of course can be spoken. A good training he must have had from a superb physique but it is not to an audience to mind those gifts of voice and of early training that Miss Shepherd has a rich tone and a true, full supply, and who her audience in her simple naturalness. Her voice is of the richest quality and great magnificence. The soprano voice of real excellence and in its perfect adjustment to the higher notes and the pathos of song. We would all gladly welcome her again. Miss Hall, our young townsman, won a world of kindred praise also. She has been known as an artist of rare ability but she has also created a play beyond all the encomiums and a high interpretation of classic music.

WEDDING BELLS

A very pretty home wedding took place at the home of Mr. S. J. Miller, Mapleton on Wednesday, Nov. 4th, when her eldest daughter, Charlotte Mary (Lottie) Maude was married to Mr. Edward Blake Hurck, son of Mr. Benjamin Hurck of Adolphustown. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. W. DeMill in the presence of about fifty guests, relatives and friends. Just at 12 o'clock, noon the bridal party entered the parlor, while Miss Neta Smith, cousin of the bride, played the wedding march. The bride, who was given away by her grandfather Mr. Nelson L. Dean, was handsomely gowned in blue silk and carried a bouquet of white carnations. Miss Nellie Hurck, sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaid and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. Mr. James Miller supported the groom, while Madalene and Marguerite Miller were flower girls. Immediately after the ceremony the wedding breakfast was served, and at 2.30 the young couple left for Napanee where they took the train for Watertown. The bride was the recipient of many and beautiful gifts, the groom's being a gold locket, that of the bride's mother was a fur-lined coat, her brother and sister an enlarged portrait of father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Hurck silver teaspoons, Mrs. Hurck, grandmother of the groom, silver knives and forks, Nellie Hurck, palm, Parliament and stand. The large number of useful gifts and the warm words of congratulation are indicative of the esteem in which the bride and groom are held.

DOCTORS SAID "CUT OFF"

"The only thing I can do now is to take the finger completely off." So said one of the leading doctors of Toronto to Mr. W. C. Edwards, P.D.C.R.A.O.F., F.O.M.I.O.O.F., the well-known Friendly Society leader, of Peter Street, Toronto. Almost a year before Mr. Edwards cut the middle finger of his left hand very badly, and blood poison ensued. For two months the doctor had been treating him, but no good had resulted, and this was the final decision. A fifty-cent box of Zam-Buk saved Mr. Edwards from life-long mutilation which $500 would not have compensated him for. He says: "The blood poison from the finger spread up my hand and arm and caused me terrible agony. After months' treatment the doctor said there was no cure, and amputation would have to take place at the joint of my arm. My hand, at that time, was all swollen up and discoloured, and I had to carry it in a sling. I left that doctor and consulted another.

After a few weeks' treatment I saw [illegible] and the poison was [illegible]. I went away to another town, and there [illegible] met a friend who advised me to try Zam-Buk. That night I rubbed a little of it on my hand and arm. I got a good night's rest for many nights. In the meantime the wound had commenced to heal, and in a short time the poison was all drawn out. This was a healthy sign. I kept on with the Zam-Buk. Every day my arm got better. I got rid of the sling altogether, and in a few weeks my finger was healed and my arm restored as a healthy limb. I owe it to Zam-Buk."

The Best Flour, Dafoe's Nonesuch, Dafoe's Manitoba Patent

By numerous tests by the best bakers the above mentioned grades have been proven to be the best flours in the market.

Ask your grocer for Dafoe's, and patronize your home mill, thereby producing flour and Shorts that you can purchase cheaper than the product of the Western mills, which has to be transported those miles of miles at great expense, and usually when it reaches you is of inferior quality.

The great complaint if the farmer of the monopoly sends to Toronto or to outside mills for an article he can get at the home store just as good, but he does not hesitate to tap four from mills hundreds of miles away, and sells you an inferior flour for the same price. Consequently you have a home product but every bag of which is guaranteed.

Choice Cornmeal and Buckwheat Flour always on hand. Feed grinding a specialty with the best feed mills known to the trade. A full stock of the best Anthracite Coal also in the market for the purchase of all kinds of grain.

Call and see prices at the Big Mill, before purchasing your Flour, Feed or Coal.

SIMMONS—HUTCHINS.

A happy event took place on Thursday night, Nov. 5th, at 7 o'clock, at the home of the bride's father, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hutchins, when their only daughter, Sarah Lillian, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. James Austin Simmons, son of Mr. Nicholas Simmons, of Wilton, the Rev. Mr. McCamus, of Odessa, officiating. The charming young bride was given away by her father, and was daintily attired in a suit of navy blue cloth and with the bride's ribbon, and wore a wreath of white flowers in her hair. The house was tastefully decorated with evergreens and little sweet flowers, and looked very pretty. After the ceremony all wished the guests, which numbered about 20, and were only members of relatives and friends of the bride and groom, repaired to the dining room, where a sumptuous wedding supper awaited them. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and useful presents, showing the high esteem in which the bride and groom are held. The happy young couple will make their home in Wilton, where the groom is a prosperous blacksmith. Many friends join in wishing them a long and happy married life.

At that instant the sound had died from the piano had soon again, and all dawned upon Cherry that the gambler beside her stood too quiet. So that his hand and voice were too steady, his glance too cold to be natural. The next moment approved her instinct.
The musicians, grown tired of their endeavors to lure back the dancers, determined to join the excitement and ceased playing. The leader laid down his violin, the pianist trailed up the keyboard with a concerting twitter and quit his stool. They all crossed the hall, headed for the crowd, some of them mutely ready to bet. Two men approached the Bronco Kid, his lips thinned and slid apart slightly, while out of his heavy lids shot there flew a red unreasonable rage. Stepping forward, he seized the foremost man and spun him aside with a curse.
"Where are you going?"
"Why, nobody wants to dance, so we thought we'd go sit front for a bit."
"Not back, all of you!" It was the first chance he had had to speak within him. A glance at his maddened features was sufficient for the musicians, and they did not defer. "Do you spose He-safe? I never saw a man bet so reckless. I guess I'd better quit, eh?" He noted the sneer on the woman's face, and without wait for a reply dashed off again. They saw him clamorously fight his way forward a pest at the roulette table. "Let me through! I've got money, and I want to play it!"
"Huh!" said "Mullins disgustedly. "He's one of them Vermont-ers I'm down that never laid in bet till he was thirty. If Gleinster loses he'll hate him for life."
"There are plenty of his sort here," the girl remarked. "He sold would fit in a fast track." She spied the Bronco Kid smattering back toward her and joined him. He leaned against the wall, watching the gesticulating head of smoke twist upward from his cigarette, vexatiously oblivious to the surrounding hubbub and shot into his emotion he had displayed two hours before.
"This is a big killing, isn't it?" said the girl.

"Don't you love"—
"I hate him," she interrupted hastily. He gave her a mirthly smile and saying the ring dealer leaving his bankrupt table, called him over and said:
"Toby, I want you to drive the horse when Gleinster begins to play faro. I'll deal. Understand?"
"Sure!" saying to give him a little "work," eh?"
"I never dealt a crooked card in this range," exclaimed the Kid. "But I'll say that man brought or, I'll kill him. I'll use a sand-belt," nod? And I want to explain my signals to you. If you miss the signs you'll answer his both and put the house on the blink."
He rapidly explained his signals to a person which to a layman would have been unintelligible, illustrating them by certain almost imperceptible shifts of the fingers or changes in the position of his hand so slight as to thwart discovery. Presently all the girl stood by and followed, like every word and motion with eager attention. She needed no explanation of the terms they used. She knew them all; knew that the "horse driver" was the man who kept the cases; knew all the code of the "inside info." To her it was all as an open page, and she memorized more quickly than did Toby the signs by which the Bronco Kid proposed to signal what card he had smuggled from the box or held back.
In fara it is customary for the case keeper to sit on the opposite side of the table from the dealer, with a device before him resembling an abacus, or Chinese adding machine. When a card is removed from the box by the dealer, the "horse driver" presses a button opposite a corresponding card on his little machine, in order that the players may see that the card has been shot; layer from play or are still in the box. His signals, clearly simple, are important. To do so he must make an error and shield the position of his counters not fully with the hands in the box on the "first turn," all bets on the table are declared void. When honesty dealt, faro is the fairest of all gambling games, but it is interesting and may hide much knavery. When the game is crooked it is fatal, for out of the hopeless of operation of card shifts there have been evolved a multitude of devices with which to thwart the unsuspecting. These are so carefully masked that none but the initiated may know them, while the freemasonry of the craft is strong and discovery unusual.
Instead of using a familiar arrangement like the "needle-bill," wherein an invisible needle pricks the dealer's thumb, thus signaling the presence of certain cards, the Bronco Kid had determined to use the "sand-belt." In other words, he would employ a "straight box"; but a deck of cards certain ones of which had been roughened or sandpapered slightly, so that, by pressing more heavily on the top or exposed card, the one beneath would stick to its neighbor above and thus enable him to deal two with one motion if the occasion demanded. This paraphernalia would likewise enable him to detect the hidden presence of a marked card by the faintest scratching sound when he dealt. In this manipulation it would be necessary also to shave the edges of some of the pasteboards a trifle, so that when the deck was forced tightly against one side of the box there would be exposed a fraction of the small figure in the left hand corner of the concealed cards. Long practice in the art of jugglery lends such proficiency as to baffle discovery and rob the game of its uncertainty, as surely as the player is robbed of his money. It is, of course, vital that the confederate case keeper be able to interpret the dealer's signs perfectly in order to move the sliding ebony disks he corresponds, else trouble will accrue at the completion of the hand when the cases come out wrong.
Having completed his instructions, the proprietor went forward, and Cherry warned her way toward the roulette wheel. She wished to watch Gleinster and could not get near him because of the crowd. The men could not make room for her. Every eye was glued upon the table as though salvation lurked in its rows of red and black. They were packed behind it until the croupier had barely room to spin the ball, and although he forced them back, they pressed forward again inch by inch, driven on by the song of the ivory, drunk with its worship, maddened by the breath of Chance.
Cherry gathered that Gleinster was still winning, for a glimpse of the wheel rack between the shoulders of those ahead showed that the checks were nearly out of it.
Plainly it was but a question of minutes, so she backed out and took her station beside the faro table where the Bronco Kid was dealing. His face wore its colorless mask of indifference; his long white hands moved slowly with the certainty that betokened absolute mastery of his art. He was waiting. The ex-ring dealer was keeping cases.
The group left the roulette table in a few moments and surrounded her, Gleinster among the others. He was not the man she knew. In place of the dreary hopelessness with which he had left her, his face was flushed and reckless, his collar was open, showing the base of his great, corded neck, while part of the game had coarsened him till he was again the violent, untamed, primitive man of the frontier. His self-restraint and dignity were gone. He had tried the new ways, and they were not for him. He slipped back, and the past swallowed him.
After leaving Cherry he had sought some mental relief by idly risking the silver in his pocket. He had let the coins lie and double, then double again and again. He had been indifferent whether he won or lost, so assumed a reckless disregard for the laws of probability, thinking that he would shortly lose the money he had won and then go home. He did not want it. When his luck remained the same, he raised the stakes, but it did not change—he could not lose. Before he realized it, other men were betting with him, animated purely by greed and the excitement of the sport. First one, then another joined till game after game was closed, and each moment the crowd had grown in size and enthusiasm so that its fever crept into him, imperceptibly at first, but ever increasing, till the mania mastered him.
He paid no attention to Cherry as he took his seat. He had eyes for nothing but the "layout." She clinched her hands and prayed for his ruin.
"What's your limit, Kid?" he inquired.
"One hundred and two," the Kid answered, which in the vernacular means that any sum up to $200 may be laid on one card save only on the last turn, when the amount is lessened by half.
Without more ado they commenced. The Kid handled his cards smoothly, surely, paying and taking bets with mechine-like calm. The onlookers ceased talking and prepared to watch, for now came the crucial test of the evening. Faro is to other games as war is to barbarous.
For a time Gleinster won steadily till there came a moment when many stacks of chips lay on the board. Cherry saw the Kid "shuffle" to the case keeper, and . . . must manage it but "spills, true." The device I did it was his first substantial gain, and the players paid no attention. At the end of half an hour the winnings were slightly in favor of the "bank," when Gleinster said: "This is too slow. I want action."
"That's right," smiled the proprietor. "Don't double the limit."
Thus it became possible to wager $400 on a card, and the Kid began really to play. Gleinster now lost steadily, but in large amounts, but with judgment and gallantry. Cherry had never seen cards played like this. The gambler was a revelation to her. His work was wonderful. If luck seemed to favor the crowd's supernes, while, to add to its impatience, the cases came wrong twice in succession, so that those who would have bet heavily upon the last turn held their money given back. Cherry saw the confusion of the "dreaser driver" even quicker than did Bronco. Toby was growing rattled. The dealer's work was too fast for him, and yet he could offer no signal of distress for fear of annihilation at the hands of those crowded close to his shoulder. In the same way the owner of the game could make no objection to his helper's low-cuptions for fear that some bystander would volunteer to fill the man's part. There were many present capable of the trick. He could only glare balefully across the table at his unfortunate confederate.
They had kept pace for an hour, the game before Cherry's quick eye de-

[illegible] tected a sign which the man misinterpreted. She addressed him quietly. "You'd better brush up your plumes."
In spite of his anger the Bronco Kid smiled. Humor in him was strunely withered and distorted, yet here was a thrust he would always remember and recount with glee in years to come. He feared there were other fare dealers present who might understand the hint, but there was none save Mexico Mollins, whose face was a study—mirth seemed to be struggling him. A moment later the girl spoke to the case keeper again.
"Let me take your place; your reins are unbuckled."
Toby glanced inquiringly at the Kid, who caught Cherry's reassuring look and nodded, so he arose and the girl slid into the vacant chair. This woman would make no errors, the dealer knew that; hen keen wits were sharpened by hate—it showed in her face. If Gleinster escaped destruction to-night it would be because human means could not accomplish his downfall.
In the mind of the new case keeper there was but one thought—Roy must be broken. Humiliation, disgrace, ruin ridicule were to be his. If he should be downed, discredited and disconcerted, then perhaps he would turn to her as he had in the bygone days. He was slipping away from her—this was her last chance. She began her duties easily, and her alertness stimulated Bronco till his senses, too, grew sharper, his observation more acute and lightning-like. Gleinster swore beneath his breath that the cards were bewitched. He was the same strong man, now as truly intoxicated as though the fumes of wine had befogged his brain. He swayed in his seat, the veins of his neck thickened and throbbed, his features were congested. After awhile he spoke.
"I want a bigger limit. Is this some boy's game? Throw her open."
The gambler shot a triumphant glance at the girl and nopalessed, "All right, the limit is the blue sky. Pile your checks to the roof pole." He began to shuffle.
Within the crowded circle the air was hot and fetid with the breath of men. The sweat trickled down Gleinster's brown skin, dripping from his jaw unheeded. He arose and tripped off his coat, while those standing behind shifted and scuffled their feet impatiently. Beside Roy, there were but three men playing. They were the ones who had won heaviest at first. None of them was against them they were both to quit.
Cherry was annoyed by sterorous breathing of her neighbor, and glanced back to find the little man who had been so excited earlier in the evening. His mouth was agape, his eyes wide, the muscles about his lips twitching. He had lost back, long since, the hundreds he had won and more besides. She searched the figures wailing her about and saw to women. They had gone, hustled out long since. It seemed as though the table formed the bottom of a shp in pit of human faces swaying, rising, sinking. It was well she was here, she thought, else this task might fail. She would help to blast Gleinster, destroy him, humiliate him. Ah, but would she?
Roy bet $500 on the "popular" card. He turned turn to lose. He bet $200 next and lost. He set out a stack of $400 and lost for the third time. Forbidden to bet on the "first turn," he bet his teeth and dabbed until the stakes grew enormous, while the dealer dealt away the new hand on his fingers where she had sunk her teeth into her lower lip. Gleinster did not rise. He sent, but forward and sat, his jaw thrust forward, his hair low upon his forehead, his eyes bloodshot and dead.
"I'll sit the hand out if you'll let me bet the 'finger'," said he.
"Certainly," replied the dealer. It is customary to observe this privilege. It means that he will call the amount of his wager without producing the visible stakes, and the dealer may accept or refuse according to his judgment of the bettor's responsibility. It is safe, for no man shirks a gambling debt in the north, and thousands may go with a nod of the head though never a cent be on the board.

Evidently the Bronco Kid knew what card lay next below, for he offered her no sign, and as Gleinster leaned back he slowly and firmly pushed the top card out of the box. Although this was the biggest turn of his life he betrayed no tremor. His gesture displayed the nine of diamonds, and the crowd breathed heavily. The king had not won. Would it lose? Every eye was welded to the tiny nickeled box. If the face card lay next below it the nine spot, the heaviest wager in Alaska would have been lost; if it still remained hidden on the next turn the money would be safe for a moment.
Slowly the white hand of the dealer moved back. He middle finger touched the nine of diamonds. It still remained out of the box, and there in its place frowned the king of clubs. At last the silence was broken.
Men, alive, some laughed, but in their laughter was no mirth. It was more like the sound of choking. They stamped their feet to relieve the grip of strained muscles. The dealer reached forth and slid the stack of bills into the bosom of his white waistcoat unruffling. The case keeper passed a shaking hand over her face, and when it came away she saw blood on her fingers where she had sunk her teeth into her lower lip. Gleinster did not rise. He sent, but forward and sat, his jaw thrust forward, his hair low upon his forehead, his eyes bloodshot and dead.

Our November Special Features

In preparing for this Winter and the Holiday Season, it was necessary for us, and all other large dealers to place their orders eight, ten and twelve months ago, when the outlook was as dark as now it is bright.

It is evident from the Canadian Customs' Reports that most mercantile houses pursued the "safe" policy. They reduced their stocks in-and-paid for, quantities as large in most cases as those required in the record breaking year of 1907. We—and we think we alone in this district—enter the homestretch of 1908 with an even larger supply than we had at this date one year ago. We are fearful that the unusual demand which will naturally focus on our stock from now till Christmas may make it impossible to do justice to buyers. In your interests we counsel early buying—to-day is better than to-morrow. Do your Christmas shopping early.

See window for Special Display of Knitted Goods.

Next Tuesday will be Bargain Day for Women's and Children's Cloth Coats.

Tuesday next, November 18th, we are going to make a Bargain Day for Women's and Children's Coats.

We aim at crowding into that day's business the greatest volume of Coat selling business that we have had for any day. To make the attraction profitable we will FOR THAT DAY REDUCE THE PRICE OF EVERY JACKET IN OUR READY-TO-WEAR DEPARTMENT.—Some a little, some much, some more. You know we never disappoint you—come early and stay late.

See Window Display for After Supper Attractions.

Women's Sweater Coats, Knit Coats.

The sweater Coat has taken to itself new graces of style of weave and color effect.

We show smart styles in Sweater Coats, suitable for wear under a coat or for without a coat. Price range $1.00 to $4.75

Our Millinery Department.

Our show room displays are at all times, rich in selection of hats for any occasion and our designers are at your call for any need.

Our buyers keep closely in touch with meanness in Millinery ideas. Every day at Robinson's is of Millinery importance of Opening Day at most stores.

We do Fur Repairing.

We do all kinds of repair work with Fur Garments, such as relining Coats, remaking Coats, changing the style of neck pieces, putting in linings in cloth coats, etc.

We keep tails, heads, muff bodies, backs, fur linings and the various things necessary to a well equipped Fur Department. Repair orders wanted before Christmas should all be in during the next ten days.

Women's Fur Coats in Great Variety.

Fur Coats with us is not a little side line, but a very important feature of our business. We do Fur Coats, with two or three exceptions, in a larger way than any other house between Toronto and Montreal.

Our orders are so important with the Manufacturer that the best attention is given our wants.

Persian Lamb Coats, $175 to $300
Black Astrachan, $125 to $300
Electric Seals, $125 to $300
French Seals, $65 to $75.00
Plain Persian Lambs, $80 to $90
Russian Lamb, $60 to $75.00

Fashion Has Smiled in the Long Fur-lined Coat for Women.

The proper length is 48 to 50 inches long. Anything shorter has a bunk number appearance. For downright service and warmth there is nothing better than Alaska Sable for the Collar and Lapels. For lining, the Ontario Muskrats are the most serviceable. Our Fur coats were all placed during the time that panicky prices were prevailing in the Wholesale Skin market. Raw skin prices to-day are back to normal conditions. That accounts for the wonderful values we are giving in Fur Lined Coats. Price range $35 to $85. Every one a winner. Black Bear, Navy, Green Coonette.

Bargain Table of Linens.

In our Staple Department we have three tables laden with linen bargains. Every piece on these tables is to be sold at a reduction. There are beautiful patterns. Table Cloths, 2, 3 and 4 yards long. Tea Cloths, hand drawn and hand embroidered. Tray Cloths, 18x18, 18x27 inch. Sideboard Covers, 36, 45 and 54 in. long. Doilies, Napkins etc. Each piece is marked in plain figures, showing the original and the reduced price.

Early Xmas buyers will find many desirable lines to pick up at a bargain.

Women's Kid Gloves Regular $1.00 for 75c.

To clear up our surplus stock of Kid Gloves we are offering a dollar guaranteed glove at 75c. a pair. In the job lot are Blacks, Fawns, White, Browns, Paris shades. While all sizes in every shade are not represented from 5½ to 8, sizes in Black

Experts at Tailoring

Having a suit made to order is like building a house. The result in both cases depends, in the main, on your contractor and workman.

There's one thing sure — you can't get a $25.00 suit made to your order for $15.00 — any more than you can get a $5,000.00 house built for $2,500.00.

THE SAFE WAY

Go to a tailor that has a reputation for making the best of work — a tailor whom you can trust and whom every patron speaks well of — a tailor who never charges a fancy price, but who asks you enough to insure the best of work. Such a decision will bring you to this Home of Good Tailoring.

FALL WOOLENS ARE NOW ALL IN. SUITS AND OVERCOATS $17.00 UP. TROUSERS $4.00 UP.

I have imported direct from the makers in the Old Country several large pieces of Best Indigo Dyed Blue Twill and Cheviot Finished Serges in medium and heavy weights. NUTS OF WISDOM.

The more aims you have in life, the less likely you are "to hit anything."

The man with the hard reputation is generally the fellow with the easy conscience.

Don't go to the trouble to learn to play the harp just because you think it will come in handy for you in the next world.

The under dog sometimes has the better grip.

Keeping up appearances costs more than the necessaries of life.

Many of us would have a better chance to be angels when we die if we didn't live so long.

While the tailor is only the ninth part of a man, he has taken the measure of many a good fellow.

The good natured man is imposed on, while the kicker gets everything.

A WELL-PLACED STING.

Father Healy—set odious loot a-sack, to-day the anti-saloon forces—every temperance person asked for not a drop to be sold in the house. Father—well Father Healy, I'll not be from now on—nothing—and I'll keep my word—I promise you that.

THE REAL THING IN VOTES.

Sir Gilbert Dalt—formerly Speaker of the legislative assembly of Victoria, was once defeated by one vote by a single majority. On visiting his constituency subsequently he was received with a special welcome by an Irish fellow-countryman.

And sure and Sir Gilbert Dalt, to be frend, you were one of the supporters—No—I'm Irish I am—I voted for them.

An east side mission worker tells of encountering a row game in one of the tenements in that region.

Two urchins were driving a rubber ball back and forth with homemade rackets. The youngsters were intently absorbed in their sport.

"Aw, we just use our own rules," replied one of the youngsters scornfully. "I hit her ball her Chunnis till he passes home, an' den I gets de right to swat him t'ree times—wid me fist."

A PROCLAMATION

Whereas, the people of our city have been led to purchase so-called remedies from which they have received no benefit whatever, and having thus wasted so much hard-earned money, it has come to pass that they know not what to believe.

Inasmuch as this unsatisfactory state of affairs exists, KNOW, THEREFORE, ALL PERSONS who are in need of such a medicine that we will supply them with VINOL on a POSITIVE GUARANTEE that if it does not succeed in benefiting them we will refund the entire amount of money paid us for it.

There is no one medicine that will cure everything, but there are some we know to be honest, reliable, and of great curative value. Such is VINOL; it is not a secret medicine,—just peptonate of iron, wine, and all the curative extractives of cod liver oil, combined. We are familiar with every particle of it, and KNOW that it should benefit every one who uses it.

Could any offer be more fair than this? You are ill; we offer you medicine which we believe will help you, and if it does not we will return your money. Is there anyone in this neighborhood too skeptical to accept this offer? You owe it to your family, to your friends, and yourself to try the medicine which we give you our pledge is a genuine cod liver and iron preparation of great merit.

We unhesitatingly recommend Vinol as a Body Builder and Strength Creator for Feeble Old People, Delicate Children, Frail Women, All Run Down Persons, and Those Needing a Good Tonic after the Grippe. or any Severe Illness, and for Chronic Coughs, Colds and Bronchitis.

[illegible] VINOL, and [illegible] tell us [illegible] money you [illegible] [illegible] improved by [illegible] agree with every one. [illegible] to-day. You won't be sorry.

"The Spoilers"

There were still a few cards in the box, and the dealer turned them, paying the three men who played, the latter took no part, but sat balked over his end of the table, glowering from beneath his shock of hair.

Cherry was deathly tired. The strain of the last hour had been so intense that she could barely sit in her seat, yet she was determined to finish the hand. As Bronco paused before the last turn-down of the bystanders made bets. They were the "case players" who risked money only on the dead pair, thus avoiding the chance of two cards of like denomination coming together, in which event "spiller" it is called) the dealer takes half the money. The stakes were laid at last and the deal shoe to start when Glenister spoke "Wait! What's this place worth, Bronco?"

"What do you mean?"

"You own this outfit?" He waved his hand about the room. "Well, what does it stand you?"

The gambler hesitated an instant, while the crowd pricked up its ears, and the girl turned wondering, troubled eyes upon the miner. What would he do now?

"Furniture, bank rolls, fixtures and all, about $12,000. Why?"

"I'll pick the pee to bee, my one-half interest in the Midas against your whole layout."

There was an absolute hush while the realization of this offer swept the onlookers. It took time to realize it. Such men were strange. There were three cards to come from—one would win, one would lose, and one would have no show.

And the boss present only cherry Malotte divined even vaguely the real reason which prompted the man to do it. It was the "gringo-ness" in him—gather a heroic stubbornness which would not let him quit. It was something deeper. He was desolate, and his heart was gone. Helen was lost to him—worse yet, was unworthy—and she was all he cared for. What did he want of the Midas, with its lawsuits, its intrigues and its trickery? He was sick of it all, of the whole game, and wanted to get away. If he won, very well. If he lost, the land of the aurora would know him no more.

When he put his proposition the bosses Kid dropped his eyes as though debating. The girl saw that he studied the cards in his box intently and that his fingers caressed the top one ever so softly during the instant the eyes of the rest were on Glenister. The dealer looked up at last, and Cherry saw the gleam of triumph in his eyes. He could not mask it from her, though his answering words were hesitating. She knew by the look that Glenister was a pauper.

"Come on," insisted Boy hoarsely; "turn the cards."

"You're on!"

The girl felt that she was fainting. She wanted to scream. The triumph of this moment stilled her—or was it triumph, after all? She heard the breath of the little man behind her rattle as though he were being throttled and saw the lookout pass a shaking hand to his chin, then wet his parched lips. She saw the man she had helped to ruin bend forward, his ivan face strained and hard, an odd look of pain and weariness in his eyes. She never forgot that look. The crowd was frozen in various attitudes of eagerness, although it had not yet recovered from the suspense of the last great waiter. It knew the Midas and what it meant. Here lay half of it, hidden beneath a tawdry square of pasteboard. With unfeeling deliberation the Kid dealt the top card. Beneath it was the trey of spades. Glenister said no word nor made a move. Some one coughed, and it sounded like a gunshot. Slowly the dealer's fingers reached their way. He hesitated purposely and leered at the girl, then the three spot disappeared and beneath it lay the ace as the king had lain on that other wager. I spelled utter ruin to Glenister. He raised his eyes blindly, and then the deathlike silence of the room was shattered by a sudden crash. Cherry Malotte had closed her check rack violently, at the same instant rising shrill and clear:

"That bet is off! The cases are wrong!"

Glenister half rose, overturning his chair; the Kid lunged forward across the table, and his wonderful hands, tense and taloned, thrust themselves forward as though reaching for the riches she had snatched away. They worked and writhed and twisted as though in death fury, the calls sinking into the oilcloth table cover. His face grew livid and cruel, while his eyes blazed at her till she shrank from him affrightedly, bracing herself away from the table with both arms.

Reason come slowly back to Glenister and understanding with it. He began to sway from a nightmare. He could read all too plainly the gambler's look of defiant hate as the man stood up from the table, his arms spread wide, his eyes glaring at the cowering woman, who shrank before him like a rabbit before a snake. She tried to speak, but choked. Then the dealer came to himself and cried harshly through his teeth one word:

"Christ!"

He raised his fist and struck the table so violently that chips and papers leaped and rolled, and Cherry closed her eyes to lose sight of his awful grimace. Glenister looked down on him and said:

"I think I understand, but the money was yours anyhow, so I don't mind." His meaning was plain. The Kid suddenly jerked open the drawer before him, drew out a revolver in his left hand and leaped forward. The miner cobid have killed him with a blow, for the gambler had erected sight at his mercy. The Kid checked himself, while his face began to twitch as though the nerves underlying it had broken bondage and were dancing in a wild, ungovernable orgy.

"You have taught me a lesson," was all that Glenister said, and with that he pushed through the crowd and out into the cool night air. Overhead the arctic stars winked at him, and the sea smells struck him clean and fresh. As he went homeward he heard the distant full throated plaint of a wolf dog. It held the mystery and sadness of the north. He paused and, baring his thick, matted head, stood for a long time gathering himself together. Standing so, he made certain compacts with himself and vowed solemnly never to touch another card.

At the same moment Cherry Malotte came hurrying to her cottage door, fleeing as though from pursuit or from some haunting fear. She had dismissed Boy Bronco, and after entering and flung her arms outward into the dark in a wide gesture of despair.

"Why did I do it? Oh, why did I do it? I can't understand myself."

CHAPTER XIV.

"MY dear Helen, don't you realize that my official position carries with it a certain social obligation which it is our duty to discharge?"

"I suppose so, Uncle Arthur; but I would much rather stay at home."

"Tut, tut! Go and have a good time."

Dawning doesn't appeal to me any more. I left that sort of thing back home. Now, if you would only come along"—

"No; I'm too busy. I must work tonight, and I'm not in a mood for such things, anyhow."

"You're not well," his niece said. "I have noticed it for days. Is it that work or are you truly ill? You're nervous; you don't eat; you're growing positively gaunt. Why, you're getting wrinkles like an old man!" She rose from her seat at the breakfast table and went to him, smoothing his silvered head with affection.

He took her cool hand and pressed it to his cheek, while his worry that haunted him habitually of late gave way to a smile.

"It's work, little girl—hard and thankless work, that's all. This country is intended for young men, and I'm too far along. His grave gravity again, and he squeezed her fingers nervously as though at the thought. She gave him room of property. From what my wife could learn, there's some truth in the story, too, so we can't blame her."

"I don't say that," Helen cried spiritedly. "Why, it's glorious. Think of the honor. You're a United States judge and the first one to come here. You're making history; you're building a people will read about you." She stooped and kissed him, but he refused to flinch beneath her caress.

"Of course. I'll go if you think I'd better," she said, "though I'm not fond of Alaskan society. Some of the women are nice, but the others"— She shrugged her dainty shoulders. "They talk scandal all the time. One woman think that a great, clean, fresh, vigorous country like this would broaden the women as it broadens the men—but it doesn't."

"I'll tell McNamara to call for you at 9 o'clock," said the judge as he arose. So, later in the day, she prepared her long unused finery to such good purpose that when her escort called for her that evening he believed her the loveliest of women.

Upon their arrival at the hotel he regarded her with a fresh access of pride, for the function proved to bear little resemblance to a mining camp party. The women were handsome gowns, and every man was in evening dress. The wide hall ran the length of the hotel and was flanked with boxes, while its floor was like polished glass and its walls effectively decorated.

"Oh, how lovely!" exclaimed Helen as she first caught sight of it. "It's just like home."

"I've seen quick rising cities before," he said, "but nothing like this. Still, if these northerners are to build a railroad in a month and a city in a summer why shouldn't they have symphony orchestras and Louis Quinze ballrooms?"

"I know you're a splendid dancer," she said.

"You shall be my judge and jury. I'll sign title card as often as I dare without the certainty of violence at the hands of these young men, and the rest of the time I'll smoke in the lobby. I don't care to dance with any one but you."

After the first waltz he left her surrounded by partners and made his way out of the ballroom. This was his first relaxation since landing in the north, and he was glad to observe that she could be missed, and as he chewed his cigar he pictured, with an odd thrill, quite new to him, what it would mean were Mrs. Champain at a two-step and caught himself resenting the thought of another man's enjoyment of the girl's charms even for an instant.

"Hold on, Alec," he muttered. "You're too old to be going to lose your head." However, he was waiting for her before the time for their next waltz was resumed to have lost a part of her gayety.

"What's the matter? Aren't you enjoying yourself?"

"Oh, yes," she returned brightly. "I'm having a delightful time."

When he came for his third dance she was more distrait than ever. As he led her to a seat they passed a group of women, among whom were Mrs. Champain and others whom he knew to be wives of men prominent in the town. He had seen some of them at tea in Judge Stillman's house and thereby was astonished when they received his greeting. He turned Helen. She shrank slightly, and he realized that there was something wrong. He looked for cause for his offense but could see nothing, but the subtleties of women were out of his realm.

"Is it that those people? Have they offended you?"

"I don't know what it is. I have known no things, better to get me."

"I'm not!" he exclaimed.

"Yes." Her voice trembled, but she held herself under control. "It seems as though all the women in Nome were here and in league to ignore me. It dates me. I do not understand."

"Has anybody said anything to you?" he inquired fiercely. "Any man, I mean?"

"No, no! The men are kind. It's the women."

"Come, we'll go home."

"Indeed, we will not," she said prondly. "I shall stay and face it out. I will not allow them to run away from, and I intend to find out what is the matter."

When he had surrendered her, at the beginning of the next dance, McNamara sought for some explanation of her sudden reception. Most of the men in Nome either heard or feared him, but he could see that they had settled his purpose and led him into a corner.

"I want you to answer a question. No beating about the bush. Understand? I'm blunt, and I want you to be."

"All right."

"Your wife has been entertained at Miss Chester's house. I've seen her there. Tonight she refuses to speak to the girl. She cut her dead, and I want to know what it's about."

"How should I know?"

"If you don't know, I'll ask you to find out."

The other shook his head amusedly, at which McNamara flared up.

"I say you will, and you'll make your wife apologize before she leaves this hall, too, or you'll answer to me, man to man. I won't stand to have a girl like Miss Chester insulted before a bunch of mining camp swells, and that goes as it lies." In his excitement McNamara reverted to his western idiom.

The other did not reply at once, for it is embarrassing to deal with a person who disregards the conventions utterly, and at the same time has the inclination and force to compel obedience. The boss' reputation had gone abroad.

"Well—er—I know about it in a general way, but of course I don't go much on such things. You'd better let it drop."

"I'm on."

There had been a lot of talk among the ladies about—well, er—the fact is, that fine young Glenister, Mrs. Champain had the neat statement to theme-er, him—I should say—on the way up from the States, and she saw fit to cut him. Now, as far as I'm concerned, a girl can do as she pleases, but Mrs. Champain has her own ideas of propriety. From what my wife could learn, there's some truth in the story, too, so we can't blame her."

With a word McNamara could have explained the gossip and made this man out his wife right, forcing through her an elucidation of the silly affair in such a way as to spare Helen's feelings and cover the lying tongues with confusion. Yet he hesitated. It is a wise skipper who trims his sails to every breeze. He thanked his informant and left him. Entering the lobby, he saw the girl hurrying toward him.

"Take me away, quick! I want to go home."

"You've changed your mind?"

"Yes, no, no, no," she panted, and when they were outside she walked so rapidly that he had difficulty in keeping pace with her. She was silent, and he knew better than to question, but when they arrived in the cabin she entered, took off his overcoat and turned up the light in the long parlor. She flung her wraps over a chair, storming back and forth like a little fury. Her eyes were starry with tears of anger, her face was flushed, and her hands worked nervously. He leaned against the mantel, watching her through his cigar smoke.

"You needn't tell me," he said at length. "I know all about it."

"I am glad you do. I never could repeat what they said. Oh, it was brutal!" Her voice caught, and she bit her lip. "What made me ask them? Why didn't I keep still? After you left I went to those women and faced them. Oh, but they were brutal! Yet, why should I care?" She stamped her slippered foot.

"I shall have to kill that man some day," he said, flecking his cigar ashes into the grate.

"What man?" She stood still and looked at him.

"Glenister, of course. If I had thought the story would ever reach you I'd have shut him up long ago."

"It didn't come from him," she cried, her eyes flashing. "He's a gentleman. It's that cat, Mrs. Champian."

He shrugged his shoulders the slightest bit, but it was eloquent, and she noted it. "Oh, I don't mean that he did it intentionally—he's too decent a man for that—but anybody's tongue will wag to a beautiful girl! My lady Malotte is a jealous trick."

"Jealous! Who is she?" Helen questioned curiously.

He seemed surprised. "I thought everyone knew who she is. It's just as well that you don't."

"I am sure Mr. Glenister would not talk of me." There was a pause. "Who is Miss Malotte?"

He studied for a moment, while she watched him. What a splendid figure he made in his evening clothes! The rosy room with its shaded lights enhanced his size and strength and perfect outlines. In his eyes was that admiration which women live for. He lifted his bold, handsome face and met her gaze.

"I had rather leave that for you to find out, for I am not sure that you'll have something more important to tell you. It's the most important thing I have ever said to you, Helen. It was the first time he had used that name, and she began to tremble, while her eyes sought the door in a panic. She had expected this moment, and yet was not ready.

"Not tonight. Don't say it now," she managed to articulate.

"Yes, this is a good time. If you don't answer, I'll come back tomorrow. I want you to be my wife. I want to give you everything the world offers, and I want to be there to enjoy it. There'll be no gossip hereafter—I'll shield you from everything unpleasant, and if there is anything you want in life, I'll buy it at your feet. I can do it." He lifted his massive arms, and in the set of his strong, square face was the promise that she should have whatever she craved if mortal man could give it to her—love, protection, position, adoration.

She stammered uncertainly till the annihilation and chagrin she had suffered this night swept over her again. The town—this crude, half born mining camp—had turned against her, misjudged her cruelly. The women were envious, clacking scandal mongers, all of them, who would ostracize her and make her life in the northland a misery, make her an outcast with nothing to sustain her but her own solitary pride. She could picture her future clearly, pitilessly, and she herself standing alone, proud, harassed in a thousand cutting ways, yet unable to run away or to explain. She would turn to Alec and face it, for her life was bound up here during the next few years or so, or as long as her uncle remained a judge. This man would free her. He loved her; he offered her everything. He was bigger than all the rest combined. They were his playthings, and they knew it. She was not sure that she loved him, but his magnetism was overpowering and her admiration intense. No other man she had ever known compared with him, except Glenister—Ralf! The boast! He had insulted her at first; he wronged her now.

"Will you be my wife, Helen?" the man repeated softly.

She dropped her head, and he strode forward to take her in his arms, then stopped listening. Some one ran up on the porch and hammered loudly at the door. McNamara scowled, walked into the hall and flung the portal open, disclosing Struve.

"Hello, McNamara! Been looking all over for you. There's the deuce to pay!" Helen sighed with relief and gathered up her cloak, while the hum of their voices reached her indistinctly. She was given plenty of time to regain her composure before they appeared. When they did, the politician spoke sourly:

"I've been called to the mines, and I must go at once."

"You bet! It may be too late now. The news came an hour ago, but I couldn't find you before. Your horse is saddled at the office. Better not wait to change your clothes."

"I telephoned out to the creek for the boys to arm themselves and throw out pickets. If you hurry, you can get there in time, only a few minutes now."

"What is the trouble?" Miss Chester inquired anxiously.

"There's a plot on to attack the mines tonight," answered the lawyer. "The other side are trying to seize them, and there's got to be a fight."

"You mustn't go out there," she cried, aghast. "There will be bloodshed."

"That's just why I must go," said McNamara. "I'll come back in the morning, though, and I'd like to see you alone. Good night." There was a strange, new light in his eyes as he left her. For one unversed in woman's ways he played the game surprisingly well, and as he hurried toward his office he smiled grimly into the darkness. "She'll answer me this morning. Thank you, Mr. Glenister," he said to himself.

Helen questioned Struve at length, but gained nothing more than that secret service men had been at work for weeks and had today reported that the fact that vigilantes had been formed. They had heard enough to make them think the matter serious

LETTER FROM A. P. BELL.

November 9th, 1903.

Mr. Editor:—Just a line with 65th birthday of our noble king. I will spend a few moments writing to you and the many readers from your valuable paper. Mrs. Bell and myself left Napanee on the 6th of last month. We came to Frankford and visited Rev. McMullen, our old minister, at his home, and found them all well and very busy with the local option. Leaving there we came to Orillia, and visited with our daughter, Mrs. Ernest May, and now we are west of Orillia, visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Dunlap. This is a very fine and productive part of the country. The potatoes here are in abundance, and the finest I ever saw, only worth 40 to 50 cents per bag.

Orillia is one of the finest towns I have ever visited, being situated on the shore of Lake Simcoe, and built on a hill sloping down to the lake, and its walks are all made of cement, and the streets swept and kept clean, making it look perfectly delightful to the eye.

PUBLIC HEALTH NOTICE

SMALLPOX.

The attention of the public is hereby called to the prevalence of Smallpox in the city of Kingston, and as a precautionary measure against the spread of the contagion to Napanee and the districts the Board of Health wishes to give notice that the greatest precaution should be taken by visitors to the infected district, and as a further precaution all persons in the Board would also recommend that all those who have not been successfully vaccinated within recent years be vaccinated without delay.

1908. THE WELL WATER.

The Board of Health also wishes to call the attention of the public to the fact that many wells in the town are contaminated, and the water is unsafe to drink. The use of boiling as a precaution, of all water for drinking purposes, is advised.

Physicians are hereby notified that in pursuance of the provisions of the Public Health Act, all cases of Typhoid fever must be reported to the Secretary of the Board, and also the source of the outbreak when it is possible to locate it.

ODESSA.

Court was held in the Town Hall. A number of cases on docket, which no doubt were justly tried by the presiding Judge Madden.

A ball was given by the young men of this vicinity, to which a good crowd responded from all parts of the compass.

The same evening a pie social was given in the M. church. There was a good gathering, and all did justice to the coffee, pies and cakes, and afterwards were entertained to music, recitations, solos, etc.

We are sorry to say that Mr. Isaac Snider was taken to the hospital on Saturday, quite ill, but slight reports are that she is improving. We hope so.

Thanksgiving dawns on a home day to many who look advantage of it to see their friends, among the many being Mr. Donaldson to Tamworth, Messrs. Hayrock and Day to Kingston, Miss Gladys Calder at home, and Miss Pearl Sproule in Kingston.

Mr. Berkshire, of Kingston, often visits the village. We wonder if he does not feel more at home here than in the city. No matter; all glad to see him.

On Saturday a great game of foot ball was played at Kingston between the Rough Riders, of Ottawa, and the Hamiltonians. The latter came out ahead, and we have no doubt will at their next game win the cup. There was quite an exciting time and many went to see the game played.

We were surprised to hear of the death of Mr. D. McDonald, on Friday last. Another one to a ripe old age. Mr. Mac. McDonald and family receive sympathies with Mr. McDonald, who lately came from the hospital here. He died on Friday and later on another killed and another made desperate efforts, but failed, and is now in the jail.

Mr. Wm. Hall, of Napanee, was a caller in this village on Monday

A great many stores let their fabrics and trimmings run in opposite directions, and often make it impossible to secure just the right quality and pattern for the dress you have selected. Quite differently are these things handled here. "I had my own toes over the edge tonight. I was mistook for you, which compliment I don't aim to have repeated."

Glenister questioned him eagerly.

"We're about the same height, an' these hats of ours are alike. Just as I came by that lumber pile down yonder a man hopped out an' throwed a 'gat' under my nose. He was quicker than light and near blowed my skelp into the next block before he saw who I was. Then he dropped his weepon and said:

"My mistake. Go on! I accepted his apology."

"Could you see who he was?"

"Sure! Guess."

"I can't."

"It was Broken Kid."

"Lord!" ejaculated Glenister. "Do you think he's after me?"

"He ain't after nobody else, an' take my word for it, it's not nothin' to do with McNamara nor that gambler's row. He's too game for that. There's some other reason."

This was the first mention Dextry had made of the night at the Northern.

"I don't know why he should have it in for me as I never did him any fa-vors," Glenister remarked cynically.

"Well, you watch out anyhow. I'll wonder how McNamara an' all the crooks he can hire than that gambler."

During the next few days Roy undertook to meet the proprietor of the Northern face to face, but the Kid had vanished completely from his haunts. He was not in his gambling hall at night nor on the street by day. The young man was still looking for him on the evening of the dance at the hotel when he chanced to meet one of the vigilantes, who inquired of him:

"Aren't you late for the meeting?"

"What meeting?"

After seeing that they were alone the other chatted:

"There's an assembly tonight at 11 o'clock. Something important, I think. I supposed, of course, you knew about it."

"It's strange I wasn't notified," said Roy. "It's probably an oversight. I'll go along with you."

Together they crossed the river to the less frequented part of the town and knocked at the door of a large unlighted warehouse, flanked by a high board fence. The building faced the street, but was inclosed on the other three sides by this ten foot wall, inside of which were stored large quantities of coal and lumber. After some delay they were admitted and passing down through the dim lit, high banked lanes of merchandise came to the rear room, where they were admitted again. This compartment had been fitted up for the warm storage of perishable goods during the cold weather and, being without windows, made an ideal place for clandestine gatherings.

Glenister was astonished to find every man of the organization present, including Dextry, whom he supposed to have gone home an hour since. Evidently a discussion had been in progress, for a chairman was presiding, and the boxes, kegs and bales of supplies had been shoved back and banked for seats. On these were ranged the threescore men of the "strangler," their attitudes there lighted dimly by scattered lanterns. A certain constraint seized them upon Glenister's entrance. The chairman was embarrassed. It was but momentary, however. Glenister himself felt that tragedy was in the air, for it showed in the men's attitude and spoke eloquently from their strained faces. He was about to question the man next to him when the presiding officer continued:

"We will assemble here quietly with our arms at 1 o'clock. And let me caution you again not to talk or do anything to scare the bird away!"

Glenister arose. "I came late, Mr. Chairman, so I missed hearing your name. I notice that you've set for business, however, and I want to be in it. Do I get what is on offer?"

"You do," replied Dextry, heavily scowling upon that unfortunate person responsible for his presence. "We have decided to act and act strongly. We have exhausted every legal resource, and now we're going to stamp out this gang of robbers in our own way. We will get together in an hour, divide into three groups of twenty men, each with a leader, then go to the houses of McNamara, Stillman and Voorhees, take them prisoners, and—" He waved his hand in a large gesture.

Glenister made no answer for a moment, while the crowd watched him intently.

"You have discussed this fully?" he asked.

"We have. It has been voted on, and we're unanimous."

"My friends, when I stepped into this room just now I felt that I wasn't wanted. Why, I don't know, because I have had more to do with organizing this movement than any of you and because I have suffered just as much as the rest. I want to know if I was omitted from this meeting intentionally."

"This is an embarrassing position to put me in," said the chairman gravely, "but I shall answer as spokesman for those men if they wish."

"Yes; go ahead," said those around the room.

"We don't question your loyalty, Mr. Glenister, but we didn't ask you to this meeting because we know your attitude—perhaps I'd better say sentiment—regarding Judge Stillman's niece—er—family. It has come to us from various sources that you have been affected to the prejudice of your own and your partner's interest. Now, there isn't going to be any sentiment in the affairs of the vigilantes. We are going to do justice, and we thought the simplest way was to ignore you in this matter and spare old discussion and hard feeling in every quarter."

"It's a lie," shouted the jagged man hoarsely, "a damned lie! You wouldn't let me in for fear I'd kick, eh? Well, you were right. I will kick. You've hinted about my feelings for Miss Chester. Let me tell you that she is engaged to marry McNamara and that's nothing to me. Now, then, let me tell you further that you won't break into her home and hang the lantern, even if he is a reprobate. No, sir! This isn't the time for violence of that sort. We'll win without it. If we can't, let's fight like men and not bunt in a pack like wolves. If you want to do something put us back on our spines and help us hold them, but, for God's sake, don't descend to assassination and the tactics of the Mafia!"

"We knew you would make that kind of a talk," said the speaker, while the crowd murmured grudgingly. One of them spoke up.

"We've talked this over in cold blood, Glenister, and it's a question of our lives or our liberty. The law don't enter into it."

"That's right," echoed another at his elbow. "We can't seize the claims, because McNamara's got soldiers to back him up. They'd shoot us down. You ought to be the last one to object."

He saw that dispute was futile. Determination was stamped on their faces too plain for mistake, and his argument had no more effect on them than had the pole rope or the lantern beside him, yet he continued:

"I don't deny that McNamara deserves anything but Stillman doesn't. He's a weak old man—some one laughed derisively—"and there's a woman in the house. He's all she has in the world to depend upon, and you would have to kill her to get at him. If you must follow this course, take the others, but leave him alone."

They only shook their heads, while some grinned at him even as he spoke. "We're going to distribute our favors equal," said a man as he left. They were actuated by what they called justice, and he could not sway them. The life and welfare of Stillman were in their hands, as they thought, and there was not one to hesitate. Glenister implored the chairman, but the man answered him:

"It's too late for further discussion, and let me remind you of your promise. You're bound by every obligation that exists for an honorable man—

"Oh, don't think that I'll give the snap away!" said the other; "but I warn you again not to enter Stillman's house."

He followed out into the night to find that Dextry had disappeared, evidently wishing to avoid argument. Roy had seen signs of unrest beneath the prospector's restraint during the past few days, and indications of a fierce hunger to vent his spleen on the men who had injured him so bitterly. vindictive nature that would go to any length for vengeance. Retribution was part of his creed.

On his way home the young man looked at his watch to find that he had but an hour to determine his course. Instinct prompted him to join his friends and to even the score with the men who had injured him so bitterly, for, measured by standards of the frontier, they were pirates with their lives forfeit. Yet he could not countenance this step. If only the vigilantes would be content with making an example—but he knew they would not. The blood hunger of a mob is easy to whet and hard to hold. McNamara would resist, as would Voorhees and the district attorney, then there would be bloodshed, riot, chaos. The soldiers would be called out and martial law declared, the streets would become skirmish grounds. The vigilantes would rout them without question, for every citizen of the north would rally to their aid, and such men could not be stopped. The judge would go down with the rest of them, and what would happen to—her?

He took down his Winchester, oiled and cleaned it, then buckled on a belt of cartridges. Still he wrestled with himself. He felt that he was being grounded between his loyalty to the vigilantes and his own conscience. The girl was one of the gang, he reasoned—she had schemed with them to betray him through his love, and she was pledged to the one man in the world whom he hated with fanatical fury. Why should he think of her in this hour? Six months back he would have looked with jealous eyes upon the right to lend the vigilantes, but this change that had mastered him—what was it? Not cowardice, nor caution. No. Yet, being intangible, it was none the less marked, as his friends had shown him an hour since.

He slipped out into the night. The mob might do as it pleased elsewhere, but no man should enter her house. He found a light shining from her parlor window, and, using the double tap a few inches, slide close. Peering through, he discovered Stuart and Helen talking. He shunned her with the shadows and remained hidden for a considerable time after the lawyer left, for the discreet one remained from the hotel and passed close by. When the last group had clattered away down the street he turned to the front of the house, and ascending the steps, knocked sharply. As Helen appeared at the door, he stepped inside and closed it after him.

The girl's hair lay upon her neck and shoulders in tumbled brown masses, while her breast heaved tumultuously at the sudden grim sight of him. She stepped back against the wall, her wondrous, deep gray eyes wide and troubled, the blush of modesty struggling with the pallor of dismay.

The picture palsied him like a knife thrust. This girl was his bitterest enemy—no hope of her was for him. He forgot for a moment that she was false and plotting, then, recalling it, spoke as roughly as he might and stated his errand. Then the old man had appeared on the stairs above, speech-less with fright at what he overheard. It was evident that his nerves, so sorely strained by the events of the past week, were now snapped utterly. A human solid-naked and paste stricken is no pleasant sight, so Glenister dropped his eyes and addressed the girl sezain:

"Don't take anything with you. Just dress and come with me."

The creature on the stairs above stammered and stuttered inquiringly.

"What outrage' is this, Mr. Glenister?"

"The people of Nome are up in arms and I've come to save you. Don't stop to argue." He spoke impatiently.

"Is this some r-ruse to get me into your power?"

"Uncle Arthur!" exclaimed the girl sharply. Her eyes met Glenister's and begged him to take no offense.

"I don't understand this atrocity. They must be mad!" wailed the judge. "You run over to the jail, Mr. Glenister, and tell Voorhees to hurry guards here to protect me. Helen, phone to the military post and give the alarm. Tell them the soldiers must come at once."

"Hold on!" said Glenister. "There's no use of doing that—the wires are cut; and I won't notify Voorhees—he can take care of himself. I came to help you, and if you want to escape you'll stop talking and hurry up."

"I don't know what to do," said Stillman, torn by terror and indecision. "You wouldn't hurt an old man, would you? Wait! I'll be down in a minute."

He scrambled up the stairs, tripping on his robe, seemingly forgetting his niece till she called up to him sharply:

"Stop, Uncle Arthur! You mustn't run away." She stood erect and determined. "You wouldn't do that, would you? This is our house. You represent the law and the dignity of the government. You mustn't fear a mob of ruffians. We will stay here and meet them, of course."

"Good Lord!" said Glenister. "That's madness! These men aren't ruffians. They are the best citizens of Nome. You don't realize that this is Alaska and that they have sworn to wipe out McNamara's gang. Come along."

"Thank you for your good intentions," she said, "but we have done nothing to run away from. We will get ready to meet these cowards. You had better go or they will find you here."

She moved up the stairs and, taking the judge by the arm, led him with her. Of a sudden she had assumed control of the situation unfalteringly, and both men felt the impossibility of thwarting her. Presently at the top, she turned and looked down.

"We are grateful for your efforts but the same to do alike."

"Oh, I'm not going," said the young man. "If you stick, I'll do the same." He made the rounds of the first floor rooms, locking doors and windows. As a piece of defense it was hopeless, and he saw that he would have to make his stand upstairs. When sufficient time had elapsed, he called up to Helen:

"Ring I come?"

"Yes," she replied. So he ascended, to find Stillman in the hall, half clothed and cowering, while by the light from the front chamber he saw her finishing her toilet.

"Won't you come with me? It's our last chance." She only shook her head. "Well, then, put out the light. I'll stand at that front window, and when my eyes get used to the darkness I'll be able to see them before they reach the gate."

She did as directed, taking her place beside him at the opening, while the judge crept in and sat upon the bed, his heavy breathing the only sound in the room. The two young people stood so close to each other that the sweet scent of her person awoke in him an almost irresistible longing. He forgot her treachery again, forgot that she was another, forgot all save that he loved her truly and purely, with a love which was like an agony to him. Her shoulder brushed his arm, he heard the soft rustling of her garment at her breast as she breathed. Some one passed in the street and she laid a hand upon him fearfully. It was very cold, very, thy and very soft, but he made no move to take it. The moments dragged along, still, tense, interminable. Occasionally she leaned toward him, and he stooped to catch her whispered words. At such times her breath beat warm against his cheek, and he closed his teeth stubbornly. Out in the night a wolf dog saddened the air, then came the sound of otsers wrangling and snarling in a nearby corral. This is a ruckless land and no cock crow breaks the midnight peace. The suspense enhanced the judge's perturbation till his chattering teeth sounded like castanets. Now and then he groaned.

The watchers had lost track of time when their strained eyes detected dark blobs materializing out of the shadows.

"There they come," whispered Glenister, forcing her back from the aperture, but she would not be denied, and returned to his side.

As the foremost figure reached the gate Roy leaned forth and spoke, not loudly, but in tones that sliced through the silence, sharp, clean and without warning.

"Halt! Don't come inside the fence." There was an instant's confusion; then, before his voice beneath had time to answer or take action, he continued: "This is Roy Glenister talking. I told you not to molest these people, and I warn you again. We're ready for you."

The leader spoke. "You're a traitor, Glenister."

He winced. "Perhaps I am. You betrayed me first, though; and, traitor or not, you can't come into this house."

There was a murmur at this, and some one said:

"Miss Chester is safe. All we want is the judge. We won't bang him, not if he'll wear the rope and hang along. He needn't be afraid. Tar is good for the skin."

"Oh, my God!" groaned the limb of the law.

Suddenly a man came running down the pinnaked pavement and into the group.

"McNamara's gone and so's the marshal and the rest," he panted. There was a moment's silence, and then the leader growled to his men, "Scatter out and reach the house, boys." He raised his voice to the man in the window. "This is your work, you damned turncoat." His followers melted away to right and left, vaulted the fence and dodged into the shelter of the walls. The clink of Glenister's Winchester sounded through the room, while the sweat stood out on him. He wondered if he could do this deed, if he could really fire on these people. He wondered if his muscles would not wither and paralyze before they obeyed his command.

Helen crowded past him and, leaning half out of the opening, called loudly, her voice ringing clear and true:

"Wait! Wait a moment! I have something to say. Mr. Glenister did not warn them. They thought you were going to attack the judge and so they rode out there before midnight. I am telling you the truth, really. They left hours ago." It was the first sign she had made, and they recognized her to a man.

There were uncertain mutterings below till a new man raised his voice. Both Roy and Helen recognized Dextry.

"Boys, we've overplayed. We don't want these people—McNamara's our meat. Old bald face up yonder has to do what he's told, and I'm agin this twenty to one midnight work. I'm goin' home." There were word whisperings, then the original spokesman called for Judge Stillman. The old man tottered to the window, a pitiable terror stricken object. The girl was glad he could not be seen from below.

"We won't hurt you this time, judge, but you've gone far enough. We'll give you another chance; then, if you don't make good, we'll stretch you to a lamp post. Take this as a warning."

"I s-shall do my d-d-duty," said the judge.

MADE WELL BY VINOL.

"Vinol is a wonderful medicine. I had no appetite; my digestion was bad; was suffering from headaches and backache. I was so weak that I had not been able to work for months when a friend advised me to take Vinol. After I had taken one bottle I noticed my health was improving. I continued its use and to-day am perfectly well. It is with pleasure that I recommend Vinol to all those who need a flesh, nerve or tissue builder." Wm. Brosseau, Waterloo, Quebec.

This is because Vinol is the best cod liver and iron tonic in the world. It creates a healthy appetite, strengthens the digestive organs, makes rich, red blood and replaces weakness with strength. The beneficial effect of Vinol in cases of weak run-down conditions or for feeble old people is simply remarkable.

We invite all old people, delicate children, weak, run-down persons, convalescents, or those suffering from chronic colds, coughs or bronchitis in this vicinity to try Vinol on our offer to return their money if it does no good. A SURPRISED MINISTER.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from bronchial catarrh, and had despaired of ever finding a cure. Judge of my pleasant surprise when I first used Hyomei, which brought complete relief. Hyomei has been a veritable godsend.—Rev. Charles Hartley, Xenfonia, Ohio.

Thousands of catarrh sufferers have given up in despair. They have tried stomach dosing, snuff, sprays and douches without success, and now believe catarrh to be incurable. But T. B. Wallace, the druggist, holds out hope to all distressed. He sells a remedy called Hyomei which is guaranteed for catarrh, colds, coughs, bronchitis, asthma and croup.

Hyomei pronounced High-o-mei is medicated air, full of the healthy virtues of the mountain pines. You breathe in the delightful antiseptic air and as it passes over the inflamed and germ ridden membrane, allays the inflammation, kills the germs, and drives out the disease.

A complete Hyomei outfit, including a hard rubber inhaler, costs but $1.00. Additional extra bottle of Hyomei if afterwards needed, costs but 50 cents. T. B. Wallace about it to-day.
